Attack On Barrett Petty: Socred

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A Social Credit backbencher today accused Premier Bill Bennett of "petty politicking" for raising the issue of NDP leader Dave Barrett taking his wife along on government air flights when he was premier.

"So what? I say it's about time politicians got out of this no wife, no family syndrome," said Omineca MLA Jack Kempf.

There might be a lot more happy politicians if they could include their wives, Kempf added.

He called the story which originated in today's edition of the Vancouver Sun "a bunch of ridiculous crap."

Barrett said today a Sun reporter showed him information which he had received from Bennett, indicating Barrett's wife Shirley accompanied him six times on trips aboard the government-owned airline.

But Barrett said all the trips were on protocol visits to which his wife was invited.

During his three and a half years in office, Barrett says he flew economy class on commercial airlines 90 per cent of the time.

And when his wife travelled with him, he paid her fare even if they both were invited to the function, the opposition leader said.

Kempf said when he first heard the story, he was furious.

When told that the information was provided to the Sun by his own premier, Kempf said: "I don't care where it came from. It is wrong. It's petty politicking."

Gaglardi took a lot of flak, Kempf said, but

Freelance Written Off?

Victoria marine surveyor Dick Meadows said today there's a less than 50-50 chance the grounded 100-foot schooner Freelance will be saved.

And even if she is salvaged, Meadows said, the cost of restoring her will be enormous.

"She has a 64-degree list and unless they can right her she's past the point of no return," Meadows said.

Meadows accompanied Dr. Philip Ney of the Quest Star Society, which planned to operate the vessel, when Ney flew down to where the schooner lies grounded on a coral reef in the San Blas Islands, east of the Panama Canal.

The Freelance was purchased by the provincial government. Up to the grounding, about $78,000 had been spent on the vessel.

Meadows said the day he was at the scene, local residents were sawing off the Freelance's boom and throwing it over the side.

"She's stripped and flooded. It's going to be a costly business if they do save her. There's a certain amount of sentimental value. People in the Caribbean will be upset when they hear (of the grounding). She's an antique," he said.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said today it will be at least another day before any salvage attempt can be made.

He said the delay is because a tug slated to attempt to pull her off the reef is being used on another job.

He said he had not heard whether two U.S. army landing craft that were to straddle the Freelance in an attempt to right her are still standing by.

MEAT PLANT TO SHUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada Packers Ltd. will lock out about 180 union workers at its Vancouver production plant Friday morning, a company spokesman said today.

The workers, members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union, would join plant workers in Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Lethbridge, Alta., locked out by the meat processing company earlier this week in a dispute over contract negotiations.

Jack Dampsy, general public relations manager, said in a telephone interview from Toronto that the company issued 72-hour lockout notice Monday after all attempts to reach a settlement had failed.

Riding Bill Tabled

Legislation to implement changes in electoral boundaries was introduced Wednesday.

The Constitution Amendment Act, 1978, was tabled less than 24 hours after former provincial court judge Larry Eckardt's controversial report on boundary changes was brought before the house.

Eckardt's report urged altering most of the province's constituency boundaries and increasing the number of MLAs by two to 57.

Opposition members have blasted the report, charging it it will weigh future elections in favor of the Social Credit party.

The new legislation — Bill 38 — follows all of Eckardt's recommendations and proposals without amendment.

The bill would increase the number of Vancouver Island ridings by one to a total of 10 by creating a new North Island riding. The new riding would be created out of the top halves of the existing Alberni and Comox ridings.

Fraser Valley would increase its representation from six to eight; Coquitlam would become two ridings and there would be a new riding in Prince George area.

The five new members would be countered by three cut-backs — two with the elimination of the double riding of Vancouver-Burrard and one in Revelstoke-Slocan.

The NDP hold all the eliminated ridings and the Socreds are traditionally strong in the areas where the new members would sit.

In their criticism of the Eckardt report, NDP MLAs have noted that the former provincial court judge ran for the Socreds in the 1966 provincial election.

Bennett denied the proposed changes will benefit Social Credit.

U.S. Dollar Rallies

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar improved on the money markets in Japan and Western Europe today. The rally was attributed partly to expectations that major U.S. banks will soon raise their prime rate to nine per cent.

Raise Considered For Underpaid Vets

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald says he has ordered a new look at 48-year-old legislation because he suspects Canadians receiving veterans allowances are underpaid.

MacDonald said in an interview Wednesday there also seems to be inequities and administrative problems which call for an overhaul of the legislation affecting 96,000 veterans, veterans' widows and orphans, and some civilians who served in wartime.

So the veterans affairs department has begun a review of the War Veterans Allowance Act and the Civilian War Allowance Act. An interim report is expected this fall.

Following the study, the patched-up legislation maybe extensively repaired or even traded in on a new model—a new act.

The government gives veterans $230 million a year in allowances.

MacDonald told the Royal Canadian Legion in Edmonton recently there may be "some rather dramatic changes to further improve our service to you, the veteran."

At the moment, veterans allowances are tied to cost-of-living increases but MacDonald said here Wednesday "I'm suspicious that it is inadequate and this is why I want to determine for sure whether I'm right or wrong."

The payment levels seem to be insufficient for a "normal way of life," said the minister.

However, he noted he was talking about allowance payments and not about pensions.

The government gives allowances to veterans or their dependants to bring their monthly income to a certain level. This is separate from disability pensions which are paid to disabled veterans and their widows.

Legislation increasing disability pensions has received parliamentary approval and is awaiting royal assent. The higher disability pensions will take effect July 1.

The basic rate for an unmarried 100 per cent disability pensioner is to rise to $7,471 a year from $7,160. The pensions are adjusted according to the degree of disability and the number of dependants.

The maximum veterans allowance for an unmarried veteran is currently $265 a month. He is allowed up to $40 a month extra from an assistance fund administered by the veterans affairs department.

He is also allowed to earn up to $1,500 a year from casual work. But his allowance is reduced by whatever disability pension he is receiving.

Breath Tests 'Unreliable'

A 20-year-old former Victorian was acquitted in Victoria provincial court Wednesday on drinking-driving charges after Judge William Ostler ruled the sampling techniques of the RCMP laboratory in Vancouver were unreliable.

The ruling by Ostler is believed to be a first in B.C. and may force the RCMP to change its methods of testing ampoules used for analyzing breath samples.

James Beck, now living in in Edmonton, was charged in January, 1977, with impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08. The two readings were both .13.

However, Ostler said the sampling techniques on the potassium dichromate used to obtain breath test readings were unreliable after testimony by Zenon Samila of Vancouver, a former RCMP lab technician who resigned in January of this year.

Ostler also noted that Samila "impeached" his own certificate of analysis in this case by testifying he did not agree with established RCMP practices in testing ampoules of potassium dichromate. In his testimony, Samila was unable to categorically confirm that the ampoules were adequately tested by himself and other members of the alcohol section of the crime prevention lab in Vancouver.

Defence lawyer Robert Higinbotham called Samila to testify while Crown counsel Richard Law called upon Brian Hodgson, head of the RCMP alcohol section in Vancouver, to rebutt Samila's evidence.

Lottery Row Sparks PM, Clark Clash

OTTAWA (UPI) — An apparent new federal plan for a national lottery has sparked a confrontation between Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark.

In the House of Commons Wednesday, Clark attacked the government's refusal to withdraw a plan, which would involve importing a computer system from the United States to dispense lottery tickets.

He said Trudeau's stubbornness was driving the provinces apart and the lottery plan was made despite the fact that nine provincial premiers had expressed "shock and disapproval" over the federal government's intention "to bulldoze ahead in this field in contradiction to understandings."

Clark said that if he were elected prime minister "one of the changes I intend to introduce is to be the head of a truthful government which keeps its word.

"Also, the head of a government of a nation that stays together rather than being driven apart by intransigence and stubbornness at the centre."

The new plan, according to Clark, would "bring revenues to governments in competition with existing provincial programs which provide funds for hundreds of thousands of people involved in voluntary organizations across the country."

Trudeau retaliated saying the opposition leader's attitude was indicative of his desire to run the country by handing all power over to the provinces.

"He obviously does not want to be the leader of a national government; he wants to stick up for the provinces on every issue."

Though Trudeau denied Clark's general summary of the federal plan, he said provinces were offered "some form of agreement" whereby the federal government would share the revenue from nation-wide lotteries with the provinces.

"This is a field which is open to both levels of government. It is a revenue producing field. I see no reason in theory or in practice why the federal government should abandon it to the provinces exclusively," Trudeau said.

The only commitment his government gave the provinces, Trudeau said was that if it intended to prolong the national lottery then a bill would be presented to Parliament.

Vancouver Beer Talks Resume

Eric Harris, chief negotiator for the breweries, said the talks involve Labatt's in New Westminster and Molson's and Carling O'Keefe in Vancouver. No new talks have been scheduled for Labatt's in Victoria and Columbia brewery in Creston.

Negotiators for all five groups of employees have rejected the breweries' initial offer which was presented last Saturday.

AT 82, PAROLE COMES AT LAST

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — William Eddington Boyd, 75, will become the oldest federal penitentiary convict next month if no one older is locked up in the meantime, prison officials say.

The oldest prisoner at present is Ace Hamel, 82, who is scheduled to be parolled from the Joyceville institution in July.

Boyd, formerly of Belleville, Ont., has been serving a life sentence at Joyceville since February for second-degree murder.

Hamel has been in jail for more than half his life for a number of non-violent crimes. He was at large for two weeks in March after escaping from prison because, he said, he did not want to die in jail.

Air Strike Called Off

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada pilots agreed Wednesday to call off a strike threat and stay in their cockpits after the company agreed to let all 1,500 pilots travel first class between flying assignments.

The strike, threatened for Monday, was averted after almost nine hours of negotiation between representatives of the pilots, Air Canada and top mediators from the federal labor department.

"The strike is off. We have reached agreement," said Norman Foster, negotiator for the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA).

Foster said the crunch issue was not first-class flight privileges, but whether letters of intent between the company and the association are binding.

The pilots had voted 92 per cent in favor of a strike at the peak of the summer travel season. CALPA said Air Canada broke an agreement with the association last year when it ended the right of first and second officers to fly in first-class sections between assignments.

Air Canada spokesman Bernard Miller said following Wednesday's meeting that while the airline was meeting the pilots' demand on the travel rights issue, it was not admitting that it had breached an earlier agreement.

"We did it in order to restore our relationship with the pilots . . . and to recognize both parties' responsibility to the travelling public and to do what we could to avoid a strike."

With the issue of travelling between assignments — deadheading — temporarily resolved, the Crown corporation and CALPA now will settle down to full contract negotiations.

The pilots have been without a contract since January. Negotiations for a new contract have been held up by the question of whether Air Canada violated an agreement by restricting first-class travel rights.

Canoeists Try Foiling Spray Plan

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — Environmentalists took to canoes and planned to go to the courts today to protest against approval of permits to apply the controversial herbicide 2,4-D to fight Eurasian water milfoil weeds in three Okanagan lakes.

Permits approved were for Okanagan, Skaha, and Kalamalka lakes.

Jay Lewis informatoom director for the South Okanagan Environmental Coalition, said Osoyoos Lake was rejected because it is small and shallow and the pesticide might not break down as quickly.

Lewis said protesters in 15 canoes paddled among employees of the water investigation branch as they did prepatory work for application of the herbicide.

About 50 persons were involved in the peaceful protest.

Canada Day Legal Soon?

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger may issue a proclamation to officially change the name of Dominion Day to Canada Day, State Secretary John Roberts told the Commons Wednesday.

But even if the name is not changed, "we intend again this year to celebrate Canada Day on Dominion Day," Roberts told Leonard Jones (Ind.—Moncton).

Jones noted that legally July 1 is Dominion Day and asked if the government is planning "to continue to disregard the law" by calling the holiday Canada Day.

The New Brunswick MP's concern had been raised by John Diefenbaker, former Progressive Conservative prime minister, last year in the Commons following a series of government announcements referring to Canada Day.

Prime Minister Trudeau had replied to the Saskatchewan MP that Canada Day was a name favored by many Canadians.

The federal government has earmarked $4.5 million to subsidize celebrations for the 111th anniversary of Confederation, hoping the birthday party will foster national unity.

Socred Raps Slap at Barrett

maybe he had to do it to remain in politics.

He said people have to realize politicians are working for the good of the people and they are cut off too much from their families as it is.

Making an issue of a premier taking his wife along on government business is "self-annihilating," he said.

Barrett said he kept detailed records and a diary of all his government trips.

He said they are available to anyone who asks, including the Sun and the premier.

"A five-minute phone call would have saved him (Bennett) a lot of embarrassment, Barrett said.

Some of the flights referred to occurred during an airline strike and there was no other available transportation, he said.

Bennett was in a cabinet meeting and unavailable for comment.

Forces Join to Pluck Three from Fishboat

A combined effort by a military aircraft, a naval destroyer and the Canadian Coast Guard cutter Racer on Wednesday evening resulted in the rescue of three people aboard the 36-foot fishboat Ebb Tide III.

The vessel had reported she was taking on water fast off Bajo Point, 50 miles northwest of Tofino.

Aboard the Vancouver-registered vessel were the owner, Randy Kerr, Ian Roberson and Lois Edwards.

An Argus long-range patrol aircraft from CFB Comox's 407 squadron was despatched and hovered over the scene in case Kerr and his crew had to be airlifted while the fishing vessel Bar Bill attempted to assist.

The destroyer HMCS JKootenay arrived on the scene along with the Racer and Kerr and his crew were taken aboard the Kootenay at 8.30 p.m. and later transferred to the Bar Bill.

The Racer put pumps aboard the Ebb Tide III and at at last report two of its crew were back on board while the Bar Bill towed the vessel into Ahousat, about 25 miles away.

Flyer's Funeral

A private funeral will be held in Victoria Saturday for William Gladstone Jewitt, 81, of 2746 Dorset, who recently was elected to the Canadian Aviation Hall of Fame.

Jewitt, who died Wednesday, was born in England and was a mining engineer. He started flying for Cominco in 1929, exploring the vast northern Northwest Territories.

His aerial explorations led to the development of Cominco's rich Con gold mine in Yellowknife and accelerated the growth of the company's lead-zinc mine at Pine Point on the southern shore of Slave Lake.

He was vice-president in charge of mines for Cominco and later was president of Pine Point and Western Mines. He retired at the age of 77 from Western Mines.

Jewitt came here in 1962.

He is survived by his widow, Genevieve, two sons, William of Trail and John of Denver, one brother Walter of Vancouver, and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Nease of Toronto. There are six grandchildren.

CBC Workers Eyeing Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — The 3,080 CBC production employees, including announcers, are taking a strike vote following a breakdown in negotiations with the corporation, a union spokesman said today.

The employees, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, had earlier voted 98 per cent to accept recommendations in a report prepared by conciliation commissioner Pierre Dufresne.

However, the union spokesman said the Crown corporation rejected most of the proposals in the Dufresne report.

Results of the strike vote should be known by next Thursday, the union spokesman said.

A major issue is contracting out work to non-union employees.

In May, a number of CBC announcers held sporadic walkouts across the country to protest the company's proposal to remove all announcers from union jurisdiction and retain them by individual contracts.

The concilliation report recommends that "all duties relating to the broadcast, rehearsal and preparation of the corporation's television and radio programs shall be performed by employees employed in a classification profile included within the bargaining unit."

Dangerous Pinto Recall 'Just Tip of Iceberg'

NEW YORK (AP) — The recent recall of 1.5 million 1971-1976 Ford Pintos because of allegedly faulty fuel tanks is only "the tip of the iceberg," a former Ford Motor Co. vice-president says.

The Pinto "is the worst case, but close behind it come many other vehicles out of Detroit," said former Ford engineering executive Harley Copp on an ABC News telecast.

Copp testified against Ford in a highly-publicized damage suit by a California teenager badly burned in a rear-end Pinto collision. A jury awarded $128 million in damages but the figure was reduced to $6 million.

The ABC show 20-20 said company documents disclosed that Ford knew it could have made fuel tanks safer on numerous late 1960 models for an extra $15 a car, but did not do so. The report also said many Ford cars failed the company's own collision tests.

The assertions are similar to those made against Pintos by the plaintiff in the California lawsuit and by the magazine Mother Jones last year in an article that led to Ford's decision recently to recall the Pintos. Ford denies that the Pintos are unsafe.

More than 80 such lawsuits are pending against automakers around the United Statesn. Attorneys-general of all 50 states this week called for an investigation of fuel tanks on all small cars because most have tanks behind the rear axle.

The ABC telecast included film of Ford testing a system with a reinforced fuel tank placed over the rear axle in 1971 that the company never put into production.

ABC said confidential Ford documents show that on about 10 million cars built during the 1960s, the filler tube on "drop-in" fuel tanks tended to pull out during crashes from the rear.

Among the models that are reported to have failed most or all of Ford's own collision tests were the 1965, 1966, 1967 and 1970 Mustangs; the 1965 and 1966 Fairlanes; 1965, 1966 and 1967 Mercuries; and some years of the Maverick and Galaxie.

FIN WHALES SAVED, GREENPEACE SAYS

REYKJAVIK (AP) — The environmentalist organization Greenpeace said Wednesday its members prevented Icelandic whalers from harpooning a school of fin whales in a 10-hour standoff on the high seas.

The confrontation took place Tuesday in the North Atlantic 160 kilometres west of Iceland, a Greenpeace news release said.

Greenpeace members manned four inflatable dinghies launched from a converted trawler and manoeuvred them between an Icelandic harpoon boat and the whales, the release said.

Carbon Monoxide Cigarette Danger?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission soon will begin testing all brands of cigarettes for carbon monoxide yield — a harmful gas produced by the burning paper and tobacco, the Surgeon-General of the United States said Wednesday.

Dr. Julius B. Richmond told the International Conference on Smoking Cessation the tests "may lead to a requirement that cigarette packages and advertising include this significant piece of information for each brand."

"Carbon monoxide impairs the oxygen-carrying capacity of the blood and we are looking into what efffect it might have on other organs," he said in an interview with United Press International after delivery of his report, New Initiatives on Smoking and Health.

"It could impair mental function to some extent. It takes several hours after smoking for the blood to be cleared. The carbon monoxide yield probably belongs on the pack with tar and nicotine facts."

GREENLAND STAYS WET

GODTHAAB, Greenland (AP) — Residents of this frigid North Atlantic island have rejected prohibition, proposed by the local leaders to stem the Greenlanders' national bender that is blamed for everything from street crime to suicide.

Reports Wednesday indicated many an islander was nursing a hangover after Tuesday's vote on a prohibition referendum — an event celebrated by some as a good excuse to hoist a few beers, the island's favorite brew.

Any More Ideas?

Opponents of any tax revolt on the massive scale undertaken by Californians have spent recent weeks asking the question: if huge tax cuts were required, where would you cut first?

This week a couple of our city fathers, Ald. John Hayes and Mayor Mike Young, offered some suggested answers to their questions. Their ideas show just how ridiculous it would be to try to make revolt-sized cuts.

Hayes' idea was to abolish entirely the regional board on the grounds that it cost more than Victoria received from it in benefits.

On the surface, this makes some sense — the budget for the regional district for the current year is $18 million. To eliminate this would mean a saving of almost $75 for every man, woman and child from Sooke to Saltspring.

Unfortunately, however, the great proportion of that money goes for services that would have to be provided by some other level of government — through tax dollars — if they weren't provided through the regional district. Sewerage and public health services are two examples.

Moreover, as Hayes himself admits, some regional mechanism would have to be developed for the provision of many of those services — it would be absurd to have each municipality develop its own sewer system with no joint planning to ensure that the pipes met up at municipal borders.

There may be some truth to Hayes' idea that the regional district is expanding too rapidly and is building too big a bureaucracy. But surely the answer to that is to tell the board members, some of whom are Hayes' fellow aldermen from Victoria, to slow down. Hayes' idea amounts to throwing the baby out with the bathwater.

Young's suggestion was almost as drastic. He wants to check what he terms the over-concern about the environmental impact of sewage disposal. "There may be some esthetic value in going to the expense we do in disposing of sewage effluent, but it is environmentally necessary?" he asked.

The answer seems to be that no one knows for certain. Scientific studies have concluded that the long-term effect of dumping raw sewage into the ocean cannot yet be properly determined.

But, in a city as dependent on the tourist trade as is Victoria, surely even the esthetic considerations have much economic benefit. Already there are too many beaches in this area where signs warn against swimming, eating the shellfish, or even touching the water because of pollution. This can hardly encourage tourists to return. Young's idea might save the government money, but it might also cost the community economically.

Neither Hayes' nor Young's suggestion has done anything to refute the notion that fiscal restraint is worthwhile but massive tax cuts would do more harm than good.

Any other politicians got any ideas forthcoming?

Law of the Sea

Funny thing, perspective. I am a shrewd businessman, you are a sharp operator, he is a thief. Distance distorts as well.

The Panamanians who lightened the B.C. government schooner Freelance of a number of articles and pieces of navigation gear were "pistol packing pirates." Armed with guns, they paddled out to the boat and brooked no interference from the crew or Panamanian police. They "looted" the provincial government's boat.

When the same thing happens in local waters, why the looters are called "crowds of amateur salvagers."

When the freighter Vanlene piled up on the rocks at the mouth of Barkley Sound, carrying a cargo of freshly made Toyotas, the basic cupidity of every fishermen, logger and beachcomber for 100 miles around was aroused.

Helicopters and a professional salvage crew took off 131 of the 300 automobiles soon after the disaster, but as soon as they were through "dozens and dozens" of west coasters descended upon the vessel.

They carried out "an almost piranha-like job of stripping the grounded Panamanian freighter" (is the job done on the Freelance perhaps poetic justice?), according to a contemporary newspaper account.

"Virtually all of 169 Japanese cars left on the half-submerged vessel have been picked clean. Lifeboats, mattresses, blankets and other ship's supplies have disappeared. 'People have been scrounging all over the decks,' said Clifford Charles of the Bamfield lifeboat station'."

They unbolted the brand-new motors from the cars and lowered them into waiting boats. "'Then they took all the wheels off, the bucket seats, back seats, even the dashboards. All that's left is maybe a couple that were too hard to get to. But all the rest are just shells'."

Pirates? Amateur salvagers? It all depends on where you sit — and how fast you are with a socket wrench. Here's to the law of the sea.

RICHARD GWYN

The End of the Beginning?

OTTAWA — It is late. Maybe it is too late. But it was still worth waiting for.

Even though many of its details are bound to be changed, the draft bill on a new constitution that Prime Minister Trudeau tabled this week is probably roughly what the Fathers of Confederation ought to have been arguing about on their way over to Charlottetown in a champagne-laden boat in 1864, if they'd been blessed with hindsight as well as with foresight.

Our present constitution, the British North America Act, speaks to the condition of Canada today about as does Rose Marie to the RCMP. It was designed for a backward, rural colony. It gives as a principal reason for creating Canada, "to Promote the Interests of the British Empire." It scarcely mentions French and English language rights. It treats the provinces like township councils. It makes no mention of the office of prime minister, but devotes three of its 146 clauses to the Speaker of the Senate.

Trudeau now proposes to transform this curious British concoction into a constitution fit for "a federation founded on equality and mutual respect."

Allow Diversity

It won't be easy. The draft statement of aims itself sums up Canada's inescapable political dilemma: "Fraternity does not require uniformity, nor need diversity lead to division." The rhetoric is noble. The reality, though, is that the west has become alienated because it believes that Ottawa has attempted to impose uniformity upon it, while Quebec has just elected a government pledged to divide the country.

The challenge for constitutionalists therefore is, somehow, to find a way to allow all the parts of Canada, regional and linguistic, to be as diverse as they want to be, and yet to allow Canada to remain as the fraternal whole that it needs to be to function as a single country.

Trudeau's draft constitution amounts to a subtle and complex attempt, at times inventive and imaginative, to reconcile these near-irreconcilables.

Broadly, Trudeau had two choices. You could call one, "provincialization." This means decentralizing more power to the provinces, with perhaps something special for Quebec, in a country that is already perhaps the most decentralized in the world. The other you could call, "regionalizing the centre." This means giving the provinces a voice at the centre, so that the federal government becomes no longer just a central government but a truly national government sensitive to regional interests.

Trudeau has elected to try to regionalize the centre. At his press conference, he explained why. "I am hoping that to a degree, debates on provincial issues will take place here in Ottawa, thus allowing provincial premiers to return to their role of governing within their area of jurisdiction." In other words, if the premiers will stop squabbling with Ottawa, Ottawa will give them less cause to squabble by giving them a voice at the Centre of the national action.

After a decade of indifference to provincial demands, Trudeau may have made his choice, and have crafted an instrument by which to execute it, too late. Quebecers "crossed a threshold" on Nov. 15, 1976, as Premier Rene Levesque has said, if not toward independence then toward a recognition of themselves as a distinct community within Canada. All provincial governments, led by Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, have developed a self-confidence and a competence that makes it unlikely they will concede, even to a reformed federal government, their recently-acquired right to speak exclusively for their provincial citizens on national issues. Provincialization, in other words, may be unavoidable, whether for good or for ill.

Still, Trudeau has gone a long way along the road he has chosen:

● A House of the Federation, half its members appointed by the provinces, will replace the Senate as the national forum for regional interests. Its members would approve appointments to federal boards and agencies, would have the power to delay (by "suspensive veto") House of Commons legislation, and would have, by a complicated system of "double majorities", effective veto power over all language legislation.

● The supreme court will be expanded, only Quebec judges will be able to rule on cases involving Quebec civil law, the provincial governments will be involved in appointments to the court.

● Provincial authority over civil rights and education is reaffirmed by allowing each province to decide whether to "opt in", to the new Charter of Human Rights and Freedoms, including language rights. However, to encourage the provinces to join, Ottawa has committed itself to waive, in the case of provinces which do so, its power to disallow provincial legislation.

The Constitutional Amendment
Bill

Text and Explanatory Notes

CONSTITUTIONAL BILL

Promote Fraternity

While much in the document will promote diversity such as the protection of minority language right, much also promotes Canadian fraternity. Proposed new clauses would give Canadians the right to own property in any province (several provinces now prohibit extraterritorial ownership) and the right to move to other provinces with full rights of provincial citizenship (Quebec has withdrawn language education rights from out-of-province anglophones).

Some of this is clever. Like the sharing of the patronage of House of Federation appointments, not just with provincial governments but, in proportion to their share of the vote, with federal and provincial opposition parties. Also, though this is a separate subject, like the way monarchy has been eased, but not rudely shoved, to the sidelines of the Canadian political system to make way for a homegrown governor-general.

Whether it is enough is quite another question. Lougheed already has opposed the House of the Federation as a device to upstage federal-provincial conferences at which he alone speaks for Alberta. Levesque has declared he will boycott constitutional conferences, except to expound his formula of sovereignty-association. All provinces are bound to demand more powers as their price for allowing Trudeau to claim paternity for a new constitution.

There's no chance that Trudeau's draft bill will turn out to be the beginning of the end, despite his ambitious timetable — phase one by mid-1979, phase two, including agreement on a rearrangement of federal-provincial powers, by mid-1981. It is just possible, though, that we may have reached the end of the beginning on our way to a new constitution.

Heroin Addiction

The heroin bill as proposed by the minister of health is being attacked from almost every side.

Frustrated politicians of the opposition even before they really know enough to debate the bill, stated they would not attempt to amend the bill but fight it all the way; this would seem to indicate they feel there is no answer to the problem and this canker in society must be permitted to continue to destroy those foolish or unfortunate enough to be enmeshed in its many ramifications.

Members of the legal profession following the dictates of the law enable the pushers to be freed on bail and thus permitted to continue their nefarious trade and nullify the efforts of our peace officers who arraigned them in court.

Then we have the pseudo-protectionists of individual liberties and their sanctimonious mouthings secure in their own inviolability from contamination.

To all these people I say "Are you your brother's keeper?" The answer is "yes" — it is your duty to protect your brethren from their weakness and the scum who fatten on them by providing at such a terrible price the bondage of drugs.

If the drugs are not available, the addict must in consequence be deprived and thus ask help from those best qualified to give the necessary support in breaking the habit.

It is hopeless in this land where we have no death penalty even for the most heinous crimes but when capital punishment is returned, as I am sure it will be eventually, let us give serious consideration to placing at the top of the list the death penalty for convicted czars of the drug trade.

If the threat was not sufficient, I am sure one conviction and carrying out of the penalty would immediately stop the trafficking in drugs.

The money spent in police involvement, court proceedings, loss to private citizens through criminal acts of the addicts, etc., can be spent on their rehabilitation and assumed return to normal living with no drugs available.

Certainly a nonentity such as myself cannot expect to raise much flak with this suggestion but we must at least raise our voices against this permissive attitude towards a constitutional right which in effect is a danger to the individual concerned.

We can surely agree on sufficient regulatory powers to protect the individual from malfeasance by the state and yet be adament enough to protect and assist those unfortunates who have been deprived of a life of normalcy through our acceptance of this intolerable situation. — Ken Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

In the Cards

The medical profession's refusal to back the government's proposal requiring patients to sign claim cards is a mite strange in the light of their recent backing of another government proposal to have addicts forcibly detained and treated for long periods of time. Giving up some of their own freedom of choice obviously hits a little too close to home for comfort. What's good for one segment of society apparently isn't quite good enough for them. If I were an addict, I wouldn't want any of this crowd treating me.

Doctors claim it will be an inconvenience to the patients as well as to themselves. I would prefer that they did not take it upon themselves to speak for me and thus remove my rights to freedom of speech and thought. I would like to say that I think this is the only really logical, intelligent suggestion that the Socreds have seen fit to offer a long-suffering and frustrated public. I would even go so far as to say that is is the first genuine ray of light to escape from the dusty, cobwebbed, basement mentality of this government. — Joan Bittorf, 1073 Davie Street.

Yates St. about 1930. Downtown needs food stores to bring in people.

Now Town Down

The Times' editorial of June 12 (Socratic Dialogue) asks information as to the kind of shoppers who come downtown, what they want, what they might patronize, and what they dislike about downtown.

Forty years ago, in 1938, Victoria's city shopping centre was a nice cozy area where ladies came to town to shop for their families' food. Saturday afternoons especially became a social event as people poured into town by car and street car from surrounding municipalities to stock up or place orders for their weekly supply of groceries. This was followed by shopping around the stores, then a pleasant rest over a cup of tea and crumpets at Terry's, Spencer's, or the Bay. Then everyone happily went home, including the shopkeepers, after spending a most enjoyable afternoon downtown.

Today in 1978, the food emporiums have vanished. Gone are the grocery departments of Eaton's, the Bay, Scott & Peden (now Buckerfields), the Safeway next to the Bay, Safeway and Ray's on Fort Street, Vegetable Row (700-block Fort Street), the twice-weekly public market on Cormorant, and the Chinese groceries on Government. Victoria abolishing food outlets killed its major attraction for successful business.

What downtown Victoria has now is an ugly conglomeration of office buildings, financial and investment companies and, believe it or not, a bank occupying practically every vital, prominent corner of the city centre. If the remaining businesses did not keep their lights on after closing hours, Victoria could easily become a ghost town at night. Need more be said as to why downtown Victoria is now town down, as people daily flock to outlying food marts? — A. L. Stevenson, 2765 Belmont Avenue.

New Leaf at VSO

I think your readers should be made aware that the Victoria Symphony in endeavoring to correct past wrongs, is embarking with new management and a new board, on a six-pronged funding drive over the next six months. In other words with the support and commitment of our community we can overcome the apathy with which the symphony has been met on all levels.

We have gone hat in hand and prepared to do our mea culpas to two of the four local councils. We are asking merely for help in funding an expected $26,000 shortfall in meeting the orchestra costs of providing summer concerts in a non-revenue period.

We fully and firmly expect to retire our deficit out of special projects. We are not "horrified" as is Mayor Mike Young at our projected budget of $1.1 million next year. We are naturally concerned but in ways that reflect our commitment to our orchestra, as a viable part of our community, as a fully professional symphony which now rates among the top five in Canada in terms of performance and as a segment of our population which will generate a 2.5 rollover back into the economy of the four core municipalites.

I think that it ill serves the symphony, comprised as it is of a group of highly dedicated, highly professional and (up until now) grossly underpaid musicians, and the community as a whole, to keep rehashing (as the politicians appear to enjoy doing) our past mistakes. The fact is that the symphony is struggling to get funding for provision of a community service, i.e. the downtown open air free concerts in the summer season. We had hoped that the community as personified by the local councils would rise to the occasion. — Jean M. Hunter, Manager, Victoria Symphony Society.

No Tin Sheds

The federal government spent vast sums of money in Ottawa in the process of beautification and quite properly so. Man does not live by bread alone. Victoria also has been, as the capital city of a great province, the object of much study, concern and expenditure. It is inconceivable, it must be a bureaucratic error, that it is proposed to build tin buildings on the esthetic level of country outhouses on our beautiful waterfront.

We cannot urge Ottawa too strongly; we plead for its thought and consideration before this offence is perpetrated on us. As Transport Minister Otto Lang loves Ottawa, consider our love for our city and stop before it is too late. It is the earnest hope of everyone in Victoria that Lang will hear our plea and stop this desecration before it is too late. Such "temporary" buildings last as eyesores forever and money is always spent unwisely, except perhaps in time of war, on crude, cheap and unpleasing structures which are an offense to the eye anywhere, but a real desecration on our seafront.

We urge Lang to act now before it is too late. — M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra Street.

VANDER ZALM . . . doesn't understand

The Freedom to be Different

THE SUN
An Editorial

It's sad, that's what it is. Sad.

We in British Columbia are rich in many ways. We have more than our share of nature's bounty. Our standard of living, while under attack, is better than most. We live in a free society that is secure enough to tolerate fools and bigots and hypocrites.

Collectively, we have the resources, the brains and the compassion to look after the less fortunate among us — the poor, the sick, the young, the unemployed, the handicapped — who need help. But the man we have employed for the last two and a half years to manage that task, Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm, still does not understand what his job is.

Mr. Vander Zalm understands that the taxpayer does not want to see the dollars he contributes to the welfare of his less fortunate neighbors go to waste. He understands that those dollars should go first to those who need help the most.

But he does not seem able to understand that attempting to impose his own moral and philosophical standards on others, and threatening them with compulsion if they fail to accept the imposition voluntarily, are actions quite incompatible with the democratic freedoms which form the basis of our society — not just the freedom of speech, but the freedom to choose where and how we will live, with whom we will associate and how we will view the world around us. The freedom, in short, to be different.

Mr. Vander Zalm, like Henry Higgins in Pygmalion but unfortunately without the same good humor, divides the poor into two classes: the deserving poor and the undeserving poor. The underserving poor, as defined by Mr. Vander Zalm, are those who are able-bodied but won't pick up shovels or won't go where the shovels are, who wear "unsuitable" clothes, long hair and beards, who live in places where magic mushrooms grow, who indulge in what used to be called living in sin. All these people have been told by the minister at one time or another that, because of what they are, they are ineligible for welfare benefits.

Last week Mr. Vander Zalm extended his categorization of the undeserving poor to include unemployed young people drawn to the "bright lights, promise and hope" of downtown Vancouver. They are cluttering up the city's welfare rolls and he wants them to move out.

The minister's heart is in the right place: he is concerned that their lives will be destroyed by liquor, drugs and prostitution. The first part of his solution — to lead them away from Vancouver by offering them food and shelter elsewhere and paying their moving expenses — is reasonable.

But, as always, Mr. Vander Zalm could not resist adding the threat of compulsion. If the young people do not succumb to his inducements, he will force them out of Vancouver by refusing them assistance.

Thus, if they do not do what the minister thinks is best for them, he will punish them by depriving them of their freedom of movement and association. And why? Because they are poor.

Mr. Vander Zalm's approach to such problems exhibits the same kind of elitist mentality as that displayed in Quebec Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin's white paper on culture and the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunication Commission's attempts to restrict access to radio and television programs. In all, the message is the same: We know what's good for you and have ways to make sure you get it.

The sad part of it is not so much that the Vander Zalms and Laurins of this country think the way they do, but that they cannot see that their approach is the very antithesis of a democratic free society.

Here in British Columbia, the sadness is doubled by the inability of Premier Bill Bennett to see the immense damage that Mr. Vander Zalm's attitude has done to the image of responsible, enlightened government that he so earnestly wishes to project — damage that he now has no hope of repairing unless the minister is moved quickly to a portfolio where his dealings with people can be reduced to a bare minimum.

The Gene Machine is Put to Work

By NIGEL HAWKES
London Observer

On an industrial estate south of San Francisco, the world's first bacterial engineering company is setting up shop. It may well turn out to be a moment in history remembered alongside the birth of the chemical industry in the 19th century, or the coming of steam power in the 18th.

For it marks the debut in the commercial world of a whole new branch of engineering, capitalizing on the discoveries made in biology since the last war. The company is Genentech Inc., and its formation has been greeted with concern, as well as admiration.

The reason is that the scientists behind the new company are pioneers in the science of recombinant DNA, a method of manipulating genetic material which holds huge promise and, some say, great danger.

By fiddling about with genes, say the critics, scientists might by accident produce a "super-bug" to which the human system would have no natural defence and which might therefore rip through the population like a plague.

The dangers of this happening have almost certainly been overstated; many scientists, including Nobel prizewinner Jim Watson, regret ever blowing the whistle and alerting the public to the potential dangers. As a result, he fears, the field is now in grave danger of being swamped with unnecessary regulations.

Genentech — short for genetic engineering technology — is the brainchild of a bright young entrepreneur named Robert Swanson. He combines a degree in chemistry with experience in starting small companies and a keen eye for new business opportunities.

In 1976 his reading of the scientific journals convinced him that recombinant DNA was about ready to move out of the laboratory and into the factory.

He brought together three scientists with the key skills: Dr. Herb Boyer of the University of California at San Francisco, molecular biologist Dr. Arthur Riggs of the City of Hope Medical Centre in Duarte, California, and Dr. Keiichi Itakura, an expert in gene synthesis. With $1 million backing from investors and financial institutions, Genentech was afloat.

Its first product will be a brain hormone called somatostatin, a chemical with a small market but a big price — $30,000 a gram. At the moment, somatostatin is mainly of interest to research scientists, but it could find clinical uses, perhaps in conjunction with insulin in the treatment of diabetes.

The first step in producing somatostatin is to build an artificial gene, a chunk of the genetic material deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) which, when introduced into a cell will instruct that cell to produce somatostatin. This is a tour de force of synthetic chemistry, but it can be done.

The next step is to infiltrate the synthetic gene into a bacterial cell, so that it can turn that cell into a miniature factory for the production of somatostatin. The gene must become part of the genetic component of the cell by being spliced to a small piece of naturally occurring DNA in the cell called a plasmid.

New branch of engineering in the commercial world

The cell chosen by Boyer and his colleagues was that of a common bacterium, escherichia coli, an inhabitant of the human gut. To minimize the risk of producing a rogue bug which might escape and wreak havoc in human guts across 49 states and maybe the world, they used a feeble strain of E coli which can only survive in the cosy conditions of the laboratory. If it escaped, it would die.

The plasmids were removed from the cells and separated from other genetic materal. They are tiny rings of DNA which can be cut open chemically by the use of an enzyme to form a strip of DNA with jagged ends, like a ribbon cut with pinking shears.

If the artificial gene is then cut with the same enzyme, its jagged ends match up and it fits neatly together with the plasmid to form a new plasmid.

Finally this new plasmid is put back into E coli cells, conferring on them the ability to manufacture somatostatin. By a series of processes of gene synthesis and manipulation, a cellular "machine tool" has been produced; able to turn out a human brain hormone to order.

It produces somatostatin very much more cheaply than existing methods, perhaps 100 times more cheaply, Swanson says. But the real prize, which is being pursued by a number of groups, is to use the same technique to produce insulin.

The market for insulin, used daily by millions of diabetics, is an altogether larger and more profitable proposition, worth $100 million a year. But the technique for producing it is harder than that for somatostatin, and it is far from certain that Genentech can win the prize. Swanson is giving no secrets away but hints that his company is a lot nearer to producing insulin than anybody gives them credit for.

It is at this point that the Genentech story becomes involved in campus politics. Some colleagues of Boyer's at San Francisco feel strongly that if a method is devised for the production of insulin, it should not become the commercial property of any group.

The unease is heightened by the fact that last year the group working on insulin accidentally breached the guidelines laid down by the National Institutes of Health for the safe conduct of recombinant DNA work.

The breach actually caused no dangers to health and the scientists responsible stopped when they realized what they had done, but the impression was created nevertheless that a race was on to produce human insulin and the normal courtesies of scientific life were being lost in the process.

Swanson admits that some people on the campus think it wrong to commercialize their research, but says that relations between the company and the university are generally good.

He points out that virtually the whole semiconductor industry spun out of nearby Stanford University — without criticism — and feels that it is simply the newness of biological research being commercialized in this way which upsets people.

In any case, the idea that any new biological technique can be isolated from commercial pressure is something of an idle dream. The rush of the drug companies into recombinant DNA, led by Upjohn, Abbott Laboratories, Miles Laboratories and others, is already under way. Swanson says that the drug companies have some catching up to do — "we believe we're one to two years ahead of them" — but nevertheless expects to have close dealings with them and to undertake research contracts for them.

For the moment, he says, he's taking things one at a time. "We had the vision we could be the first to demonstrate the commercial viability to produce human insulin the same way some time this year — and we will, with luck."

Spreading a Fog Over the Economy

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — CSIP, pronounced SEE-SIP, is the newest agency spawned by the federal government's never-ceasing need to show it is doing something about the economy.

CSIP will last, Dr. Sylvia Ostry says, two years from July 1. It will cost, she says, about $3 million a year, and have some 75 economists, statisticians, communicators, etc.

It seems cheap enough. It's heartening there's a built-in promise of "sunset" in 1980 for CSIP. Indeed, if you believe her, CSIP will get off the scene only a month or so before or after the AIB (Anti-Inflation Board), pronounced not ABE, but A-EYE-BEE.

The news about CSIP has been dribbling out for weeks, but last week we got the full cloth of it from Chairman Ostry of the Economic Council of Canada (known as E-SEE-SEE).

Out of an authority found in a section of the act creating the ECC comes the sky-hook for CSIP, THE CENTRE FOR THE STUDY OF INFLATION AND PRODUCTIVITY. Thus, out of the ECC, which was the successor to the NPC (National Productive Council) comes the CSIP to carry on part of the work of the AIB, which inherited some of the functions of the PIC (Prices and Incomes Commission.)

Have you followed me thus far? Let me confuse you further.

CSIP is to gather data, do research, write, and then COMMUNICATE. How Madame Ostry stressed communicate! Stuff which the general public could understand! Quarterly reports. Research reports.

A key part of CSIP's role, using "macro-economics" and "sectoral analysis", will be to define and reveal a sort of "early warning system" for inflationary factors, including something known as "the underlying rate of inflation."

Mark that phrase: "the underlying rate of inflation." I'll call it the URIN factor, pronounced "urine."

Why is URIN now important? Partly, because this is what CSIP and its 75 polymaths and $3 million a year for two years will be coming up with.

Why does Canada need URIN now? Inevitably, a regular economic indicator gets to be too blunt for the politicians' comfort. So it must be fudged.

That's why, long ago, unemployment percentages were "seasonally-adjusted."

They had to be interpreted in the light of "participation rates," then reduced by something known variously as "structural unemployment" and "frictional unemployment." We have economists talking about "real unemployment rates," as distinct from the old-fashioned, seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment. Over in the indexing of consumer goods and the famous CPI, we've had adjustments in base period and adjustments in components as the percentage figure rose higher and higher.

The beauty of URIN, at a time when the CPI or Consumers Price Index is projecting a nine per cent plus rate for this year, is that it is somewhere around five per cent. Just to sling such a lower figure into the debate is a check on those whimpering about the aged, the widowed and orphaned.

Doesn't it cheer one to know that the underlying inflation rate is five per cent, not nine?

But I've digressed again.

The AIB had the mandate to study the causes of inflation, and its economic research group had immense powers to pry information from companies. As much power, if not more, than STATSCAN ($135 million and 5,000 employees this year) which prepares the CPI and the countless other regular data.

After the government decided to end price and wage controls and the AIB, a need was seen for an economic monitoring agency, other than STATSCAN or the department of finance and industry, trade and commerce. This post-controls agency should, in common sense, have been a "a son of the AIB" but the provinces not only wanted the AIB gone, they wanted no son of it. So the ECC got the proposition, out of which has come CSIP, an intellectural relic if you want, of AIB, but embedded (just for a passing time) in ECC.

Who saw the need for a monitoring agency? I am sure it had to be the top officials in the PMO-PCO. After all, AIB had not wrestled inflation to the ground but it had to be dispensed with.

Someone must have remembered that PIC had been erased without any vestiges or relics left in place. Our mandarins couldn't face a total wipeout of their latest exercise in whipping inflation, yet they couldn't, given provincial feelings, carry on anything of the AIB.

Dr. Ostry presented this new but familiar duck in her own pleasant and stylish fashion; what I would call a fog of candor. There were so many "on the one hand, on the other hands," so many "you will remember," such a friendly bobbing through time, incidents and acronyms, that most of us in her presence were moved to think (I think): "Isn't she nice."

katharine whitehorn

LONDON — The fuss at Maiden Erlegh School, Reading, England, is not, for once, about maidens dressing sexily too early, as such rows usually are: it's about the right of the female teachers to wear trousers to school. The headmaster has said they are not to wear trousers, and the women teachers are defying him to remove them.

We need not go into the deficiencies in toilet training, breast feeding or other features of his male chauvinist piglet hood to figure out why he takes such a stand; for men are all too often in confusion about what they think women — especially professional women — should wear.

They'll agree they like a good snigger at a bikini. They'll concede they can get a bit bored with too much dark blue double-knit. But beyond that they'll say — and probably, really think they mean — that they just like a woman to "look nice."

Yet clothes trigger a much deeper response in them than they are prepared to admit.

I had a startling example of this among international executives recently, at a management course in Fontainebleau, France. They were shown films of managers in action, concerning an American firm, Dansk Designs, which had attempted to go for growth and to streamline what was essentially a craft-centred business.

The managers were asked to comment on three characters they had seen on film: a potter, an American troubleshooter (male) and a marketing director who was a very glamorous American female with long blonde hair.

In a roar of urf-urf-urf hilarity, they immediately said she was "hard," "sterile," "doesn't listen" — and an earlier course had yelled "Fire her!"

Yet the lecturer was able to prove that in all their responses they were simply airing their own prejudices. They said the potter was "uncommercial," though he had been as cost-conscious as anybody; they automatically admired the American whiz-kid though he had set up several things for which they blamed the lady. And as for "dosen't listen" — "She was the only person taking notes!"

Plainly, what they simply couldn't take was what were for them contrary signals: to them the flowing hair and attractive clothes had to be a sexual come-on, and they couldn't bear to see it coupled with male task-oriented business behavior. Yet the maligned woman had probably learned to dress like that because a common male put-down of the career woman is that she's a shrivelled old bag with no sex appeal.

It begins to be clear to me why the most acceptable career women on our TV screens are always astronauts (in space suits) or doctors and scientsts (in white coats.) Or lady judges wearing gowns — the accepted male drag of their trade.

Before the Judge

The preliminary hearing into charges of armed robbery, possession of stolen property and unlawful confinement faced by a James Bay couple was set Wednesday for Sept. 21 in Victoria provincial court.

Deborah Jane Mavis Frank, 21, and Peter Larsen, 29, both of 425 Simcoe, were arrested in connection with a Friday night holdup at the McKenzie Avenue liquor store in which $14,500 was taken and manager William James Taylor bound.

Both elected trial by judge and jury through their counsel and Miss Frank was released on $1,500 surety bail Monday while Larsen was denied bail Tuesday by Judge William Ostler.

A teen-ager with a penchant for cars was jailed for one month after he pleaded guilty to taking an auto Wednesday morning without the owner's consent.

Kelly Raymond Davey, 2122 Cook, was originally charged with theft over $200 and possession of stolen property but defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming subsequently entered a guilty plea to a charge of taking an auto without the owner's consent.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Davey and two juveniles were spotted by Victoria city police at 1:30 a.m. as they were leaving a car. Laughton said the officers checked the vehicle and noted that articles from the glove compartment were strewn on the floor. Police learned later that the car had been stolen from two blocks away.

Laughton said Davey had been convicted March 23, 1978, in Calgary for theft over $200, possession of stolen property, and breaking and entering, receiving a suspended sentence and one year's probation on that occasion, and on May 5, 1978, in Victoria for taking an auto without the owner's consent, receiving a $200 fine.

Two Greek fishermen from the Mainland were fined a total of $250 after changing their pleas to guilty on charges of assaulting a peace officer and causing a disturbance by fighting.

Panagiotis Kouroupis and Demetre Melahrinakis were fined $25 each for the assault and $100 each for the disturbance.

Laughton said the incident occurred Jan. 24 at the Harbour House Hotel at Ganges. He said a fight was started and RCMP were called in. Two calls for reinforcements had to be made, Laughton stated, and Kouroupis finally had to be handcuffed and dragged to the police car.

Defence lawyer George Angelomatis of Vancouver said the whole affair started when two or three others who were drinking at the hotel made references to "DPs," infuriating the two fishermen.

"I deeply regret the intolerance," Ostler said, referring to the remark, before levying the fines.

Three young men charged following a mugging Saturday near Beacon Hill Park elected trial by judge and jury and had their preliminary hearing set for Nov. 3.

George William MacDonald, 23, and Charles Vernon Mooring, 21, both of 960 Inverness, and Bruce William Mooring, 19, of 710 Fort, were jointly charged with robbery and mischief causing wilful damage to the alleged victim's car.

Charles Vernon Mooring was also charged separately with possession of a stolen watch and money.

A 21-year-old Friendly Cove man who kicked in a $300 window Wednesday morning was fined $100, placed on eight months' probation and ordered to pay restitution

Irving Joseph Marks, who told Judge Blake Allan he was temporarily living in Brentwood, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Court was told Marks went to Quonley's Market at Government and Fisgard and asked the owner to call a taxi for him.

Shortly after, Laughton said, Mark kicked in a six-feet-by-six-feet plate glass window. The owner of the store, a woman, gave chase and Mark was finally caught by police near the Kings Hotel on Yates.

Plywood, 3032 Jutland, and eight pieces of shiplap were taken from Stewart and Hudson Lumber, 410 Gorge Road East. Total value of the lumber was placed at $70, Laughton said.

Allan placed the youth on 12 months' probation and also ordered him to seek and maintain suitable employment.

John Gordon Marshall, 2891 Craigowan, was charged with a Tuesday morning break-in at the Gorge Vale Golf Club, 1003 Craigflower.

Defence lawyer Bruce McConnan entered a plea of not guilty on behalf of Marshall but his bail application was turned down.

A trial date of July 17 was fixed and Marshall will remain in custody until that date.

"He really should go to jail but I can't bring myself to doing that," Ostler said of a 58-year-old man convicted of his third drinking-driving conviction.

Thomas Charles of East Sooke Road pleaded guilty on May 31 to impaired driving on April 29 and was remanded to Wednesday for a presentence report and sentencing.

Laughton reminded the court Thomas was convicted of impaired driving in 1964 in Duncan and on Sept. 8, 1977, in Victoria and was fined $150 and $100, respectively.

However, court was advised Thomas suffered a stroke two years ago and was handicapped by it.

Ostler suspended sentencing on Thomas, placed him on one year's probation, ordered him to perform 50 hours of community service work and accept any Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society counselling as directed, and prohibited Thomas from driving for one year.

Driver Can't Remember

The driver of one of the cars involved in a head-on collision more than four years ago in Duncan testified in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday she remembers little of what happened.

Jo-Anne Meyer (formerly Pearson), 23, said she was unconscious for three days after the March 17, 1974, accident in the 1400-block Maple Bay Road when another car crossed into her lane and her recollection is not very good.

"The last thing I remember is seeing a car coming on our side of the road. That's all I remember," she said.

She said she couldn't really tell how far away the other car was but she agreed she said at a pre-trial hearing it was 12 feet.

In court, she said she felt she had to give a distance on the prior occasion and it could have been two or three car lengths away.

In cross-examination, she said her answer at the pre-trial hearing that she never saw the other car until the collision was not correct.

"I saw it some distance away," she said.

Asked if she could have taken evasive action, she replied: "I don't know. I could have. I could have, maybe."

The driver of the other car, Michael Roy Summers, 21, of Duncan, completing his testimony, denied his car had partial steering failures before the accident and said the failure of his steering that day was a surprise.

He agreed it was an unfortunate turn of phrase when he told police shortly after the accident that there was six or seven inches of play in the steering either way. He did not mean a total of 12 or 14 inches, he said, but three inches either side of centre.

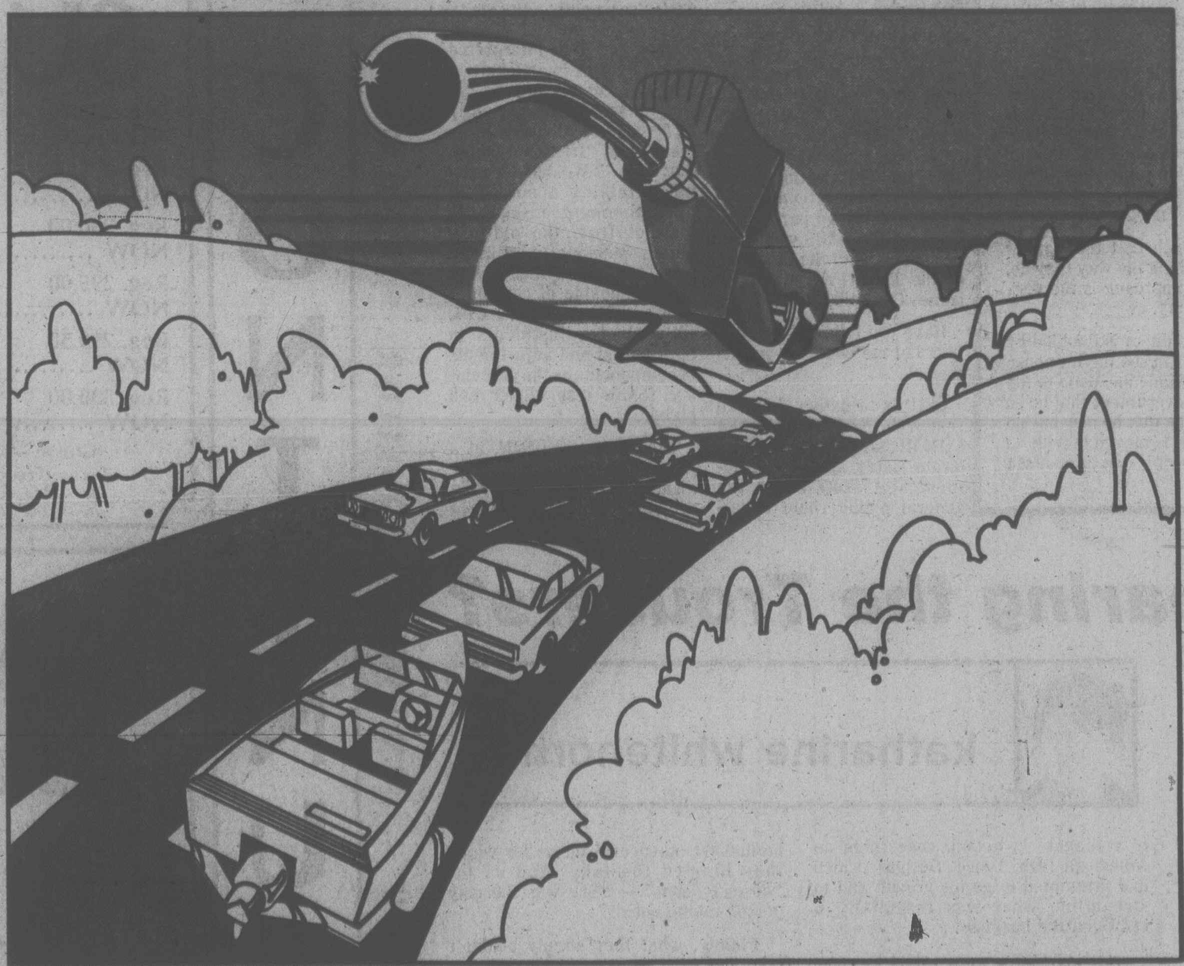
ESSO EXTRA PREMIUM UNLEADED: this is the weekend to find out how much better it performs.



If you fill up with Esso Extra Unleaded gasoline now, you'll enjoy its high octane performance all weekend. If you start out with your usual regular unleaded, you'll probably be ready for our premium unleaded coming home.

Think about it: with regular unleaded you're going to have to live with a loaded-down car, hills, passing in heavy traffic, hot weather and gasoline that just doesn't have the high-octane performance of Esso Extra premium unleaded.

That could mean knock, weak acceleration, run-on; frustration you just don't need.

Was there ever a more sensible time to test your first tankful of Canada's first and only premium unleaded?

Year's Delay Threatened On Hospital

Work on the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road could be delayed as much as a year.

The regional hospital and health planning commission was told Wednesday Health Minister Bob McClelland has rejected a proposal to use a cost plus-fixed fee contracting method, which would have allowed early work to start on the project before final drawings for the latter stages of contsruction have been completed.

The minister, however, still wants the work to begin this summer and is willing to approve such work as grading, water, sewer, drainage and roadwork.

The commission is then expected to get a standard contract for the rest of the construction.

Regional hospital planner Murray Halkett said the project manager for the hospital's construction has recommended against the minister's suggestion because of the impact winter weather would have on the open site.

He said either the work on the site should start this summer with construction of the hospital following immediately or the whole project wait until ground conditions are again favorable next summer.

McClelland is opposed to the cost plus-fixed fee method because of the difficulties encountered at Burnaby General Hospital where problems with an electrical sub-contractor ended with considerable added costs. In spite of this, Halkett noted, the project — which had the same project manager, Unicon — still came in within the original budget and a full year ahead of schedule.

The commission, which is hoping for an Aug. 15 start, voted Wednesday to ask McClelland to reconsider his position.

Commissioner Art Young said the region had hired a project manager with the consent of the minister, because it had decided to use fast-tracking. He estimated that about $100,000 had already been spent with fast-tracking in mind.

Dr. John Dickson said any delay on the hospital could mean costs would ultimately be much higher. Halkett agreed, and said estimates from the quantity surveyor indicate the hospital plan might cost more than budgeted, although more study would be required.

It appears the quantity surveyor added liberally in order to cover contingencies and inflation and, if those costs had been estimated too high, the project might be within budget, Halkett said.

"If the ministry insists on holding this up for a year they could prove the quantity surveyor right," commissioner Terry Prentice said.

Piggery Put-Down Asked Near New Hospital

Central Saanich will be asked to draw up a bylaw outlawing such operations as a piggery, which is being proposed for a site near the new Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

Health Minister Bob McClelland, who first drew the matter to the attention of the Capital Regional District's community health committee, will also be asked to take direct action.

The proposed piggery site is within 700 feet of the new hospital.

The committee decided Wednesday it has little jurisdiction although regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil is demanding that any construction be set back 330 feet from the centre of the main highway.

In a letter, Marc Crouteau of Western Recreation Resources Ltd. said earlier plans to have a one-storey building — including a five million gallon annual capacity liquid manure storage area — have been abandoned because of the setback restrictions.

Now he plans two three-storey buildings, producing at least 10,800 to 15,000 pigs each market year.

He said the land had originally been bought in 1962 when a recreation complex had been planned.

TEACHERS OPEN OWN SCHOOL

Two teachers in the Bank Street school oral communications program being moved to Margaret Jenkins elementary have decided to open an independent school.

Former Bank Street head teacher Bridget Flynn and teacher Joyce Zink will open their own oral communications program in September.

The new program will operate from the old Cathedral School at 520 Niagara.

Both teachers resigned from the Greater Victoria School District this year after trustees decided to shift the four-year-old Bank Street program to Margaret Jenkins because of declining enrolment.

The independent program will be named the Renaissance School and will teach Grades 1 through 4.

'Negative' Media Irks Lawson

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Teamster director Senator Ed Lawson Wednesday accused the Canadian media of petty and negative attitudes that are out of touch with the positive views of the general public.

"We (the public) must drag the press kicking and screaming along to a positive view," he told the Victoria Chamber of Commerce at The Empress.

He drew a prolonged ovation when he said the media is constantly negative toward any new idea or proposal.

He singled out the Vancouver Sun and the Victoria Times as major offenders.

The Sun, he said, criticized him for holding a meeting of Canadian Teamsters in the United States.

"There were only 10 of us at the meeting. The previous year I had brought 1,000 Teamsters to Canada for a meeting. When I phoned the publisher of the Sun to talk to him about it, I couldn't reach him. He was on holiday in Mexico."

In addition, he said, advertisements put out by B.C. newspapers offer carriers the inducement of trips to Knotts Berry Farm and Disneyland.

"I thought these places were in California. They may be in the Fraser Valley or in Duncan."

He said the Times printed a "false" story on March 31 with a headline "218 Per Cent Pay Hike in Year for Sen. Lawson."

The story, by Washington correspondent Marjorie Nichols, said Lawson received $70,817.08 in salary and expense money in 1976, up 218 per cent from $39,184.33 in 1975.

The story said Lawson's increase in percentage terms was in excess of the federal wage guidelines which apply to most rank-and-file union members in Canada.

Lawson told the chamber: "I am here to state the story is false, it is full of bloody lies and the Victoria Times should hang its head in shame. If they want to sue, my lawyers are standing by."

He added that neither the publisher of the Times nor any member of the staff checked with him to verify the story was true and they also should hang their heads in shame.

(The story of March 31 states: "Sen. Lawson could not be reached for comment. His senate office in Ottawa said he was in Vancouver but his Vancouver office said he was out of town and could not be reached by telephone." A long letter from Lawson giving his side of the story was published on the Times' editorial page shortly after it was received).

Lawson briefly commented on the labor scene, saying both management and labor also have to develop positive attitudes.

Canada needs an atmosphere of co-operation and self-sacrifice if the nation is to survive, he said.

Lawson also criticized proposed changes in the constitution which would give provinces power to appoint senators.

This would put members of the Parti Quebecois in the senate and add to the disruptive tone of debate. In addition, he said, the move would simply exchange federal patronage for provincial patronage.

Mounties Need SIN: Aide

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The McDonald commission into RCMP wrongdoing was told Wednesday by assistant RCMP Commissioner Henry Jensen that the social insurance number has developed into an identification card the RCMP considers "vital" to its work.

He urged that the federal police force be given free access to social insurance files.

The unemployment insurance commission last week, after 36 years, cut RCMP access to its files until the royal commission decides on the issue.

Lester Pearson's assurance to Parliament in 1964 that the social insurance registration system would never be turned into a police ID system was recalled by royal commissioner Guy Gilbert.

He asked whether Jensen was aware of Pearson's assurance, made when he was Liberal prime minister.

Jensen had never heard of it. He said he would have to study it.

Gilbert observed that Jensen's testimony was in some contrast with the late prime minister's view.

"We don't have an ID in Canada, directly or indirectly," Gilbert said.

"Correct," replied Jensen, "but this (the social insurance number) has evolved into one."

Lawyers for Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais, meanwhile, forced the commission into closed session today on grounds national security would be jeopardized if a brief on the RCMP security service's relations with the unemployment insurance commission is made public.

The 11th-hour objection that forced the secret session came after Allan Lutfy, representing Blais, got a look at a brief commission counsel Tony Kelly was to distribute today as background to the relationship.

Lutfy said his objection came after consultation with members of the security service, who have raised an increasing number of objections in recent weeks to having testimony heard in public.

Thwack, Swish and Then Crash!

. . . A Slice of Life for the Grews

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

For almost two years Herb Grew and his family have been under fire from misguided missiles and — not surprisingly — they're getting a mite edgy.

Although the house is well removed from the green itself, Grew notes that it must be just the right — or wrong — distance from the tee to be a target for sliced shots.

In fact, it's getting so that they flinch every time they hear the thwack of a driver connecting with a ball.

To date there have been two alarming incidents, and Grew wants action from Saanich municipal hall before someone is seriously injured or killed.

In October last year his wife Iris was hit by flying glass when the window of their kitchen-dining room was shattered by a ball.

And a few months later their 13-year-old son was struck on the shoulder by a ball which crashed through the bathroom window. Fortunately, it had lost most of its impetus so he wasn't hurt.

The aluminum siding surrounding their sundeck is pockmarked with indentations from errant balls. Grew says his 18-year-old daughter Jayne became so nervous about sitting out there he had to build a special screen of unbreakable glass at head level.

Weekday golfers are generally older, experienced players who don't put a lot of beef into their drives, so there's not much danger. But weekends are the problem time.

As Grew says: "The weekend golfers are the ones we have to watch. The young swingers fancy themselves as a second Jack Nicklaus, and hit big drives — often with no control at all.

"The balls are lethal, like bullets."

He says he realized when he purchased the house that there would be some nuisance factor, from golfers retrieving balls for instance, but he didn't expect his family would be under bombardment.

A 10-foot screen which municipal staff erected alongside the tee last year has done little to solve the problem, because sliced shots are still lofted over the net.

Grew says the municipality should either screen the area properly or relocate the tee in a safe position.

Failing that, he would like unbreakable glass installed in his kitchen and bathroom windows.

In the letter he wrote to Saanich in late April, he said: "I have gone part way to safeguarding my family by screening the sundeck on the property and think that Saanich council, who approved the building of houses in that area, should ensure that it is safe to live there."

Parks and recreation director Bill Young told the Times Wednesday he hopes to meet with Grew and discuss measures to safeguard the house.

"Any house on the perimeter of a golf course will be exposed to balls at one time or another," Young said. "Hopefully we will be able to resolve this one very quickly."

Four Teen-Agers Hurt in Grinding Car Crash

A spectacular single-car crash on West Saanich Road Wednesday night sent four teen-agers to Royal Jubilee Hospital, two in serious condition.

The vehicle skidded 218 feet along a ditch, bounced back on to the road, travelled 81 feet, returned to the ditch, flipped over and rolled three times over a distance of 65 feet, knocked down a steel post and ended up in a driveway 88 feet further down the road.

Thomas Keith Halsey, 17, of 2778 Seaview, the driver of the car, and Jennifer Teresa Little, 17, of 1560 Elm, were reported in stable condition this morning with undetermined injuries.

Saanich police said Halsey lost control of the car rounding a sharp curve in the 5000-block at 10:40 p.m.

They were both unconscious when taken to hospital.

Two back seat passengers, Barry Newton, 17, of 2950 Seaview, and David Sheffield, 17, of 3917 Tudor, stayed with the car and escaped with relatively minor injuries. Newton was treated and released, and Sheffield is in satisfactory condition.

CRD Attack 'Nonsensical'

A recent attack on the Capital Regional District by Victoria Ald. John Hayes was shallow and nonsensical, board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

"It was a loud, hollow sound coming from an empty space," said Campbell of Hayes' call to have the CRD disbanded by the provincial government.

Hayes said the regional body cost more than it's worth.

Campbell said that "nobody's perfect and I'd like to see our budget reduced," but the CRD's major costs are on services the municipalities have asked for.

He said the regional health function, for example, is provided by the CRD because the municipalities of Oak Bay, Victoria and Esquimalt directed the district to perform that task.

"That's the single most costly item in our budget," said Campbell. "We deliver that service a good deal more efficiently than any municipality could, and if Victoria wanted to take that service back there'd be no opposition from me."

Campbell said the CRD provides services in a more efficient manner than any other system yet devised.

He said if the regional government was disbanded then the intermunicipal committee would be called on to organize services "and I doubt if you can think of anything funnier than that."

Campbell said the intermunicipal committee is "the most time-consuming and unproductive body in politics — they can't even deal with the unimportant matters that face them now so you can only imagine what would happen if they had to deal with major items."

Campbell said the way for the regional district to reduce costs is to cut back "on the artificially high standards imposed upon us by the bureaucrats of Victoria and the bureaucrats of Ottawa."

He said that "the other high cost is what I call the high cost of protest — the cost of dealing with highly organized and vocal minorities."

Ask The Times

Q. Was there a Canadian record set by the armed forces in west-east air travel in 1976? K.S.G.

A. Two CF-5 jet fighters of 434 Squadron took off Nov. 22, 1976, at CFB Comox and flew non-stop to CFB Shearwater, N.S., with two in-flight refuellings by a 437 Squadron jet tanker. The pilots were Capt. Rod Sword, of Victoria, and Lieut.-Col. Scott Clements, who made the flight in four hours, 29 minutes, 17 seconds, the first to do so.

Tool Plant Eyed By City Investor On College Land

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria investor Nick Liberto said today he wants to build a tool manufacturing plant on 85 acres of Camosun College property.

Liberto said the plant would employ 105 people, be modern, attractive and non-polluting.

Liberto said Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has offered to help him get started but the question of the land will have to go to cabinet.

"There is a cabinet meeting this morning and I believe it is being discussed. We are all set to go once a site is obtained."

If the Camosun deal is rejected, Liberto wants to trade for land in the industrial plant being created by Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier — if it can be prepared in time.

"We must get an answer on the land right away," Liberto said. "We have orders for $2.5 million worth of bits per month, starting Jan. 1, and unless we can produce the bits by then we will lose the order."

He said he will go to Alberta next week to study sites in that province if there is any indication the Victoria proposal will be stalled in red tape.

His partner, Dennis Derosz, has created a drilling bit that is creating interest because it does not require ball bearings and therefore does not wear out as quickly as conventional bits, he said.

The company has been incorporated as the Derosz Tool Co.

Liberto said the company has or can raise all the required financing.

"Land is the big question. We need a site and we need it quickly."

He said he selected Camosun College because there is a total of 225 acres, much of it unused.

"This would be a modern, clean, non-polluting plant. It would fit in well with houses in the surrounding area," he said.

The company needs about 85 acres eventually, he said. It would like to start with about 45 acres and would construct a building of 32,000 square feet.

Liberto said more land would be required and more buildings constructed as orders for the drilling bits increased.

Liberto said he is not looking for any government favors except help in obtaining land quickly.

Greater Victoria industrial development commissioner Barry Mayhew said the plant would be an important addition to the local economy if land can be obtained.

50 Films To Be Shown At Beacon Hill

Sponsored by the National Film Board and the city, the program starts July 4.

The films will be presented every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday - a total of 12 programs - during July. The showings will begin at 9 p.m. and last about one hour.

There will be six showings on Aug. 1, 2, 3, 8, 9 and 10.

One Last Varoom

After a long up-hill battle the Victoria Motorcycle Club has won the fight to run their annual dirt bike contest at Mount Douglas.

But the hillclimb scheduled for Oct. 1 will be the last one, ending a tradition that started in 1919.

The Victoria and Saanich parks committee Wednesday reversed an earlier decision to ban the bikes from Mount Douglas this fall. In changing its mind, however, the committee also made it clear there will be no next time for the club.

He said the club will look for a new location.

The hillclimb issue blew up earlier this year when the club decided not to take the parks committee's original decision lying down.

Club members wrote letters, lobbied politicians and Wednesday showed up with a 2,500-name petition supporting the hillclimb.

The committee relented, but at the same time told the club to start looking for a new site for next year's climb.

In 1979 the climb will celebrate its 50th year.

Critics of the event say it's noisy and encourages other motorcyclists to ride along the trails in Mount Douglas Park, where bikes are forbidden.

A FLASHBACK

An Island of Memories

These are some of the memories shared by George Mead-Robins of 3730 Craigmiller, former chief electrician for Canadian Industries Ltd. on James Island, and his son Pat.

The elder Mead-Robins married in 1934. He and his family lived in the island's village of about 46 houses until June 1962 when the island's school was closed and the residents left for Vanvouver Island across the way.

The Mead-Robins described how the pitch fire allowed the Indian crabber to see his prey in the water. The son rememberered it as "a most romantic sight."

His father recalls being able to buy two large crabs for 25 cents and times when salmon was so plentiful James Island residents would dig surplus fish into their gardens for fertilizer.

"If you were lucky a 15 to 20-pound salmon would fetch a quarter."

He recalls the village as being an Eden, the residents all vying for the annual prize given to the family with the most improved garden. He remembers how some university students, hired for the summer by CIL, were diverted to gardening chores on the village's sidewalks.

Memories like these are stirred by those who have lived and worked on the island with the news that CIL is shutting down its nitroglycerine operation and laying off 96 men on Sept. 30, leaving only about five people to operate an explosives distribution point.

While the shutdown is shattering for some of the workers, it promises peace for the deer that roam the island.

The deer became so plentiful over the years that Raymond Rivers, who now lives at the Harbor Towers in James Bay, was employed as the official shooter, his friend, the elder Mead-Robins, recalls.

These are not native deer. They're descendants of fallow deer, imported from Scotland in 1907 by Irving H. Wheatcroft, general manager of the Kentucky Valley Railroad. Wheatcroft had bought the island from Dr. G.L. Findlay and Lady Sybil Findlay. The deer were brought in to create a private hunting ground on the island.

Such people as Sir Richard McBride and Sir James Douglas enjoyed the thrill of the hunt in the private preserve.

When the James Island plant began operating in the First World War, there were as many as 1,200 working on the island. A camp for the men was established on the spit and another camp for women workers on the northern end of the island.

James Island was put on the map and the Nova Scotian port of Halifax nearly erased in 1917 when the French ship Mont Blanc exploded in Halifax harbor.

The Mont Blanc was carrying TNT from James Island and the explosion devastated the north side of the city, killing 2,000.

On the island itself, however, the safety record has been good with only one tragedy. That occurred in September 1946 when nearly a ton of gelatine exploded, killing three men and injuring two.

Mostly memories of the island have been quiet ones — fishing, crabbing and walking the sand-sweet beaches.

The simple life is exemplified by one memory recorded by Jim Bond, who used to run the 29-passenger ferry. As a pre-schooler in 1915 when the first log cabins were being built he recalls his first Christmas on the island. The Christmas tree was decorated with shin plasters and a 25-cent bill.

When the main workforce leave the island for the last time in September little will be left but buildings, a few men, memories — and the deer.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were moderately lower in active trading on the Toronto stock market.

Declines led advances 207 to 147 with 212 issues unchanged.

Consumers Distributers resumed trading after a one-day halt for news it has agreed to acquire May Department Store Co.'s catalogue showroom business in the U.S. It dropped 1⅛ to $13⅝ on the sale of 42,000 shares.

The week-long halt in shares of Q Broadcasting Ltd. continued. It last traded at $8⅞ a share.

Among other industrials, Provincial Bank of Canada fell ½ to $15, Crestbrook Forest ⅛ to $6⅝, Canadian Imperial Bank ⅛ to $28½, Oshawa Group class A ⅛ to $7 and Carling O'Keefe five cents to $4.40.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market inched upward with gambling and airline issues providing bits of excitement in an otherwise lacklustre session.

The slight turnaround apparently began late Wednesday, when the Dow Jones, down by about six points, began to rally. The slight upswing after two days of declines continued into today as the troubled dollar began to recover some lost ground on foreign exchange markets, apparently on reports President Carter may raise oil-import fees to discourage petroleum consumption unless Congress enacts his oil-tax plan.

But analysts also were waiting for the Federal Reserve Board's weekly money supply report, scheduled for release after the 4 p.m. NYSE close, to see if new credit-tightening moves might be indicated.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mainly lower in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Volume at 2.30 p.m. EDT was 424,600 shares traded, compared with 405,200 shares traded up to the same time Wednesday. Brascan A was down ⅛ at $16½, Domtar ¼ at $17½, Inco A ⅛ at $18, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ⅛ at $28¼, B.C. Forest Products ⅜ at $28 and Simpson's Ltd. ¼ at $5⅛. FCA International was up 15 cents at $2.55 and Alcan ⅜ at $30¼.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — Prices drifted lower today in light trading, though the market closed above lowest levels following a technical reaction, dealers said. Near the close of trading the Financial Times index was down 2.9 at 452.7. Government bonds showed a net fall of ⅛ after losing up to ¾ at the outset following selling ahead of the call on the long tap, and on concern over the status of sterling after a further narrowing in the differential between U.S. and British interest rates Wednesday. Gold shares softened in line with the fall in the bullion price. U.S. and Canadian issues eased.

Weak Growth Predicted

OTTAWA (CP) — Senior business executives are becoming more optimistic about the immediate future of the economy but remain reluctant to increase investments into new plants and equipments, a private research group said Tuesday.

The Conference Board in Canada, which includes business, government and labor members, says in its latest survey of business intentions that the outlook for non-energy business investment is one of very weak growth in the near term.

The board says the hesitation to increase investments is consistent with the current state of the economy.

The survey measures business attitudes in the second quarter of this year.

"Senior business executives are becoming steadily more optimistic about the outlook for sales and profits and about the investment climate in Canada," the survey concludes.

"However, considering the current low levels of resource utilization in the economy, a sustained improvement in sales will be required to stimulate investment spending."

The board says a strengthening in demand, a major factor in economic growth, appears to be currently underway, but real output by industry has yet to respond.

"Even when production does begin to accelerate, investment can still be expected to lag increases in output by several quarters due to the substantial unused plant capacity which currently exists."

Businessmen were also a little more optimistic about the unemployment rate in this quarter than they were in the first three months of the year.

About 45 per cent of the respondents said they expect to hire employees compared with only 33 per cent in the first quarter and 29 per cent a year ago.

Employers expect their sales to improve, especially in foreign markets, but anticipate a higher rate of inflation in coming months, the board said.

Many businessmen believed that labor costs, declining in 1977, will be reversed in the next six months.

"The worsening of the unit labor cost outlook may be due, in part, to businessmen's perceptions of the impact of the phased removal of wage-and-price controls in 1978," the survey says.

Foresters Oppose Delay In Controversial Act

The influential Association of B.C. Professional Foresters has come out in support of the province's new forest act.

In a news release the organization, which represents over 1,000 professional foresters, said the government's two new forest bills are a step in the right direction.

The association says amendments are needed to the legislation, but praises the bills for breaking new ground.

"One of the most important aspects . . . is that for the first time, the productive forest land base of the province will be clearly identified and procedures developed for its protection. In other words, lands best suited to the growing of timber will not be lost by allocation to other uses without well-documented cause. This places lands suitable for 'forest farming' on the same basis as lands primarily of value for agricultural purposes," stated the release.

The association says it has told government several changes should be made to the bills, however, to "provide professional foresters with a clear mandate to apply intensive forest management proactices to the forests of the province."

A growing number of groups, led by the Coalition for Responsible Forest Management, has called on Forest Minister Tom Waterland to withdraw his legislation until the fall session of the house. Opponents to Waterland's legislation say more time is needed to study the implications of the bills.

But a spokesman for the professional foresters said Wednesday the association does not believe the bill should be delayed.

"It's been four years in the making and we believe it should go ahead, even though that's not the general opinion of a lot of groups," said the spokesman.

Critics of the legislation say the foresters' stand is a predictable one but is inconsistent with a recent memo the association sent to all MLAs.

The memo states that there is a serious timber shortage in the province and that "without an expanded commitment to forest management, the provincial economy will be adversely affected."

Paul George of the Coalition for Responsible Forest Legislation says the new forest legislation does not respond adequately to the problem of timber shortage.

"There's a serious supply problem and the bills should have strong wording in addressing silviculture, but it just isn't there," said George.

He said the main thrust of the coalition's attack is that the legislation does little to ensure that B.C. will have adequate timber reserves far into the future.

George said that its schizophrenic for the foresters to endorse the bills on the one hand and to admit timber shortages already exist on the other.

Executive Director Appointed

Ralph Vipond has been appointed executive director of the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped, president J. Gordon Skinner announced today.

Vipond now holds the position of administrator and is responsible for the operation of the association's programs. In his new position, he he will assist the board of directors in the development of policy as well as manage programs and facilities of the association.

Also appointed to a new position is Mrs. Kay Averill, who has been named executive secretary. She has served as general secretary for five years.

Inquest Set For Friday

An inquest will be held Friday into the death of James Algin Lonsbury, 74, of 195 West Maddock, who was killed Tuesday after being struck by a car on Gorge Road.

The inquest will be conducted at McCall Bros. funeral home, 1400 Vancouver, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile, Saanich police are seeking witnesses to the accident which happened at 8 p.m. at Gorge and Donald.

Fish, Wildlife 'Sacrifice'

Fish and wildlife in the virgin Tsitika watershed will be sacrificed to the economic interests of the forest industry, says United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union representative Scotty Neish.

Neish says his biggest concern is the ability of salmon to survive clearcut or block logging in an area with steep mountain slopes and heavy rainfall.

In a report to the union, Neish said he was continually out-voted while serving on the provincial government's Tsitika resource planning committee.

"I found myself in complete opposition to the committee's proposals as to how the Tsitika watershed should be logged," he said.

Neish said he was invited to join the committee in March, six months after it was formed, and by that time the government had already decided to put logging interests first in the Tsitika.

"It was obvious the committee had opted for and committeed itself to the clearcut method of logging," said Neish.

"When I raised the question of some other type or method of logging, I was told in no uncertain terms that anything other than clearcutting was not economically viable and therefore was not given consideration."

Under the clearcut system a logging company stakes out a section of forest and logs off all mature timber in blocks of 1,000 acres or less.

Clearcutting can be devastating to fish through increased erosion and stream flooding and to wildlife through winter starvation.

The Tsitika planning committee recently released its proposals for the wilderness valley, located on Vancouver Island's east coast, north of Campbell River, and is now holding public hearings on the matter.

The final public hearing will be held tonight in Nanaimo. The meeting starts at 7 p.m. at Malaspina College.

DISTAR Arrives In July

Two Victoria educators will hold the first DISTAR (Direct Instruction Systems for Teaching and Remediation) training workshop conducted in B.C. by Canadian instructors.

Learning assistant teacher Terry Dodds and special counsellor Sue Foote will conduct the three-week workshop, which starts July 17 at the University of Victoria.

Teachers, teacher aides, child care workers and faculty of education students will be interested in the workshop. The format will give participants a total 12 hours of lecture, role playing and video tape sessions and six hours actual classroom experience.

The classroom work will involve teaching small groups of children the DISTAR instructional programs for reading, arithmetic and language.

Purpose of the workshop is to acquaint participants with the DISTAR method.

During the six sessions they will be trained in the use of direct instructional materials, teacher presentation skills, reinforcement techniques, placement tests and grouping and practice on key formations.

The workshop is divided into two instruction levels: primary and intermediate.

Enrolment is limited to a maximum of six people in each section.

Marriage Act Reintroduced

Legislation designed to keep marriage break-ups out of the court system was reintroduced in the legislature Wednesday.

A similar bill to the Family Relations Act was tabled a year ago but died on the order paper.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said at that time the delay was to ensure public input.

The bill will set guidelines for the division of property in marriage break-ups and ensure children and spouses are supported after the dissolution of a relationship.

It also provides for couples to write their own marriage contracts detailing a division of property.

If no contract is entered into and a relationship ends, the new legislation provides for property and posessions to be evenly split between the two spouses.

The bill brings under one roof and updates a number of separate statutes including the Equal Guardianship of Infants Act, Extra-Provincial Custody Orders Enforcement Act, the old Family Relations Act and the Unified Family Courts Act.

In the area of child guardianship, custody and access, the bill specifies that the best interests of the child are to be the paramount consideration in any court proceedings.

Where couples have no contract of their own, Bill 22 specifies that in a marriage breakdown each is entitled to a half interest in family assets.

A family asset is defined as property owned by either or both spouses or their child and used for a family purpose.

These include food, shelter, recreation, and family incomes.

The definition excludes, however, business assets where the non-owning spouse made no direct or indirect contribution to its acquisition or management.

If disputed, however, the onus is on the spouse who owns the business to prove his partner had no indirect contribution.

This aspect protects spouses whose contribution is through homemaking.

While providing for spouse support, the new legislation recognizes the spouse should become self-supporting as soon as possible after the breakdown, Gardom said.

Child and spouse support are two areas that needed revamping, Gardom said.

About 21,000 single parents rely on some kind of government assistance because their support payments are in arrears.

This cost taxpayers $122 million last year.

In a survey in Victoria recently, it was found that more than 60 per cent of spouses were in arrears.

The new bill allows for more efficient enforcement of maintenance.

Tax-Paid Meals Denied by Grace

Prince Rupert NDP MLA Graham Lea said Wednesday he has obtained memoranda which prove Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy has taken civil servants and Social Credit colleagues to lunch, claiming the lunches as expenses and receiving reimbursement from the government.

However, Mrs. McCarthy said the accusation is false and that she has never taken colleagues to lunch at the taxpayers' expense.

Lea said he doesn't believe Mrs. McCarthy and will ask her to appear before the legislature's public accounts committee next week to explain the situation.

Meanwhile, the committee will also recall Dave Brown, the premier's commucations adviser.

Committee chairman Lorne Nicolson (NDP—Nelson-Creston) said he has documentation that Brown was taking colleagues for lunch and being reimbursed. Brown denied the charges Tuesday.

Army Withdraws

NAIROBI (Reuter) — The Salvation Army has withdrawn its last officer from Uganda, Brigadier Stella Bywaters, after being ordered by the government to terminate its social work there, the All Africa Conference of Churches (AACC) said Monday. The Salvation Army was among 27 religious organizations, mostly Protestant, which were banned by Uganda last September. However, it had been allowed to continue running its home for cripples and another home for abandoned children near Kampala.

Longest Day A Nightmare For Mussels

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Wednesdy, June 21, was the longest day of the year.

For Victoria Mussels, bringing professional baseball back to Victoria after an absence of 24 years, it turned out to be a long nightmare. One of the longest.

Rocked by a 13-run inning and stung, overall, by pitching that graciously dished out 18 walks, Victoria's home debut turned out to be a disaster in the form of an 19-1 Northwest Baseball League romp for Bellingham Mariners.

Pro baseball's return attracted 731 paying customers to Royal Athletic Park. Not a total to make promoters beam happily but, still, a figure that didn't alarm Don Rogelstad, Jim and Lynn Patrick, the three young men who went out on a limb to obtain the franchise for Victoria.

Competing against harness racing and a Shamrock lacrosse game, the Mussels had a few other opening-day problems, but none could match the one experienced by the three pitchers paraded to the mound by the Victoria team.

While a strong wind made things difficult for both teams, it was obvious before the game that Victoria "pitching" was in for a rough night. Even the ceremonial tossers ran into a snafu.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf was asked to participate. He showed up at the park about a minute after Victoria Mayor Mike Young went solo and threw the traditional first pitch to Mussels' catcher Vito Lucarelli.

As it turned out, Young's only toss was closer to the target than many thrown by Dave Cheadle, Roy Moretti and Scott Harding, the harried hurlers who combined to give up the 18 walks in addition to hitting two other batters and allowing 11 hits. Among the hits was Werner Lajszky's grand slam homer in the second and a three-run blast by shorstop Jim Cabella in the disastrous seventh.

Mariners, amply stocked by the parent Seattle Mariners, struck for their 13 runs in the seventh by cashing in on eight walks, two hit batters, one error and only five hits.

Victoria field manager Jim Chapman wouldn't deny that his pitching let him down. It made for an inglorious opening but, in actual fact, Victoria's performance really wasn't as bad as the scoreboard indicated.

Support, on that count, came from Bellingham manager Bob Didier.

"Once we got that early jump, there wasn't a thing Victoria could do right," Didier said, "I've seen it happen many times. I think the Mussels have the makings of a good team."

Morganti made difficult pivots look easy in completing the game's two double plays.

Newby, going three-for-four, accounted for half of Victoria's hits and scored the Mussels' only run after tripling in the third.

Pitching, however, has become the big question mark for the Mussels, beaten 7-4 by Bellingham on Tuesday. The Victoria team, hoping for improvement on the mound, sends Frank Lucarelli against the Mariners tonight.

Bellingham 040 020 (13)00—19 11 1
Tim Hallgren 1-0, Tracy Harris (7), Anthony Jordan (9) and Dave Valle, Rod Hudson (8); Dave Cheadle 0-1, Roy Moretti (7), Scott Harding (7) and Vito Lucarelli. Home runs — Bellingham: Warner Lajszky, Jim Cabella.

A FLYING START but oh, what a middle as Victoria Mussels dropped a 19-1 Northwest League baseball decision Wednesday to Bellingham Mariners in home opener at Athletic Park. In this first-inning double play by the Mussels, shortstop Jim Chapman (standing) and second-baseman Doug Morganti (crouching) combine on forceout of Bellingham's Charlie Lindsay (left) with relay to first nailing batter Mike Moore. Roof fell in after that as the Mariners, who play here again tonight, counted four in the second, two in the fifth and 13 in the seventh. (Irving Strickland photo).

Agony, Ecstacy At World Cup

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — After one of the most astonishing days in the history of World Cup soccer, the Netherlands and Argentina qualified for what could be one of the greatest finals since the tournament began in 1930.

Wednesday was the day of decision when all the agony and ecstacy of players and fans boiled over.

The agony was suffered by Brazil, West Germany and Italy, the long-standing masters of the game. The ecstacy belonged to Argentina and the Netherlands, neither of whom has ever won the Cup.

Argentine fans indulged in an orgy of wild celebration after their team's 6-0 victory over Peru which assured the host nation's participation in Sunday's final.

In Buenos Aires, in Rosario where the match was played and in cities across the country it seemed that all 25 million Argentinians were out on the streets, shouting, laughing, waving flags, blowing whistles and car horns.

Argentina's joy was not shared by Brazilian manager Claudio Coutinho and his players who watched on television as their hopes vanished.

Coutinho said bitterly at a press conference that the Peruvian performance had been a "betrayal to football."

Brazil was hoping that Peru would prevent Argentina winning by the four-goal margin they needed to overtake the Brazilians in the Group B standings.

Coutinho said Peru "lost more than a game, they lost their football prestige."

He contrasted the Peruvian display with that of Austria, which beat defending- champion West Germany, 3-2. "The Austrians fought hard and the victory was a victory for sport."

In the Peruvian capital of Lima, sports commentators called for an investigation into what they called Peru's "shameful performance."

When the day began, six teams were still in with a chance of taking the final stride to the final.

West Germany saw the crown it won four years ago slip away when it lost 3-2 to Austria.

Poland, third in 1974, dropped out of the race when it lost 3-1 to Brazil.

The Netherlands also appeared to have lost its chance when it went a goal down to Italy and had its goalkeeper carried off on a stretcher. But the dashing Dutchmen had shocks in store for the confident Itlians, scoring twice in the second half.

Now the final will between the tournament's two top scorers — the Netherlands with 14 goals and Argentina with 12.

WENDY UNCORKS STUNNING UPSET

LONDON — Wendy Barlow of Victoria made her mark in the tennis world here Wednesday.

She survived a 64-player qualifying round for the prestigeous Wimbledon tournament in spectacular fashion, upsetting Hanna Mandikova of Czechoslovakia, who is the No. 1 ranked junior in the world, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Barlow now advances to the main draw at Wimbledon and is scheduled to meet Helen Gourlay of Australia either Tuesday or Wednesday.

13-Hit Barrage Shells Ingraham

Seaboard Construction shelled Ingraham Hotel with 13 hits Wednesday en route to an 8-2 Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League victory at Central Park.

Paul Morrison and Brian Grexton also hit homers for Seaboard and Barry Wilkin picked up the pitching victory by tossng a five-hitter.

Morrison scored twice and drove in three runs while Sinclair and Grexton each scored twice.

In Heywood Men's League play, Jim Miller pitched a three-hitter to lead Victoria Athletics to a 7-1 decision over Remco Office Systems at Heywood Avenue Park.

Miller struck out 10 batters and walked only one while going the distance.

Athletics scored six runs in the second inning to claim the win on a triple by John Iverson, a double by Ryan Talbot and singles by Miller, Bernie Talbot, Jim Walshas and Hank Klatt.

At Hyacinth Park, CJVI Vicettes defeated MacDonald's Furniture 9-5 and Hygrade Radio nipped Strawberry Vale Juniors 8-6 in Victoria Senior Women's League play.

Yeta Dilalla set the pace for Vicettes with three singles in three trips to the plate to drive in four runs.

Marian Ell drove in five runs to spark a comeback effort by Hygrade, which trailed 6-5 after four innings. Ell tripled and scored in the fourth and then hit a two-run double and scored on a pair of sacrifices in the fifth frame.

Seaboard 302 021 0—8 13 2

Champion In Arrears

PENTICTON (CP) — Anna-May Taylor of North Vancouver fired an 11-over-par 83 Wednesday to take the first-round lead in the British Columbia senior women's golf championship.

The second and final round over the Penticton Golf and Country Club course will be played today.

One shot back of Taylor is Colleen McCullough of Vancouver, while Joan Lawson of Victoria, the defending provincial champion, is two shots back of the leader.

Ina Guile of Chase and Tory Reid of Salmon Arm both fired 89, while Margaret Todd of Victoria shot a 90.

Mrs. Todd is the 1977 Canadian senior women's champion.

Three-Part Tale To Irish Victory

For Goalkeeper Scott Marshall of the Shamrocks it's becoming a habit; for Charn Dhillon, it was just another case in a long line of similar "old reliable" situations; and for Ron MacNeil he will probably score many more hat tricks, but none that will satisfied him more than the one he got Wednesday night.

This was the three-part story of the Shamrocks' 14-6 victory over Coquitlam Adanacs in a Western Lacrosse Association game at Memorial Arena as the Rocks moved three points ahead of second-place Nanaimo Timbermen in the league race.

For Marshall, it was his second successive win over the Adanacs, and by an identical score, even if the route was different. In his first start for the Shamrocks on May 31, he blanked the Adanacs for the longest time while the Rocks were getting a lead established. This time, he turned it around. He was the bulwark, particularly in the second period as the Rocks went on one of their patented scoring outbursts to put the game away. Besides, it was his third victory of the season.

The Adanacs had started fast with goals by Mike Mitzel and Jim Aitcheson to take a 2-0 lead at the four-minute mark. But then entered the Dhillon tale. Charn (the one with the "h") popped in two goals while Chris Hall was getting one to help get the Irish back on track.

Moe Jodoin gave the Adanacs their last hope when he tied the count at 3-3, and then the Rocks took over.

Before the period was over Jerry Kustaski and Rick Baker had given the Irish a 5-3 edge. With the start of the second period, MacNeil got his first, Dennis Somner his first of the year, Norm Baker his 20th of the season , Hall his second of the game, the Shamrocks had a 9-3 lead and the way Marshall was playing, it was all over but the playing of the final period.

Shamrocks moved on top 10-4 before the end of the second and except for a mixup between Andy Reid of the Rocks and Mitzel of Coquitlam there wasn't too much to get excited about, especially for the A's.

What they didn't exhibit in finesse, they contributed in a rough sort of way, and were better at the latter than the former even with reinstated player-coach Bob Salt in uniform.

But MacNeil's third goal and his 40th of the year, was a treat to behold. It came at 14:40 of the third. Knocked loose from the ball, and knocked down in the corner in the process, MacNeil fought back to regain possession, beat two Adanacs, cut in front of the net and scored with a sprawling backhander for which he received a big ovation, and rightly so. MacNeil also contributed five assists to the cause.

Otherwise Dhillon also had three goals and five assists. Hall had two goals with singles going to Norm Baker, Rick Baker, Larry Bell, Ranjit Dillon, Kustaski and Somner.

Aitcheson was the only Adanac to get more than one goal. He had two, Salt, Jodoin, Dave Durante, and Mitzel had the others.

Marshall blocked 34 shots, the same number as Greg Thomas (17) and John Lewis (17) had between them. The big difference was that he allowed only six goals, and right now has the best average in the WLA.

The Shamrocks are idle until next week when they play Vancouver Burrards in Vancouver, Tuesday, and then host New Westminster Salmonbellies here on Wednesday.

. . .Two More Winners

Victory Eluding Michell

Victorian Bud Michell is still waiting for a winner.

But he came close Wednesday during the ninth race in the harness-racing card at Sandown Park.

Michell, new to harness-racing but not to horse-racing, purchased Fort Tilden just before the start of the 57-day Sandown meet and watched Wednesday as the eight-year-old standardbred was a closing second in the ninth.

Fort Tilden ran in the $10,000 class at Calgary and has career earnings totalling $65,000.

But in its Sandown début, Fort Tilden did the mile in 2:10 4/5ths and was fifth more than four lengths in arrears as the odds-on favorite. During subsequent races, it finished fifth and third while slowly returning to form.

On Wednesday, Fort Tilden drew the No. 7 post in the seven-horse field and driver Keith Linton saved ground on the rail most of the way and challenged in the stretch run.

But Dave Jungquist managed to coax a little more out of Dusty Tex in the final few yards and the six-year-old gelding went on to win its third race in four starts.

Jungquist, who also drove Spunkey Dale to victory in the second race, is now ahead in the driver standings with 11 wins for the 11 days.

Joe Mohorich, who steered two winners to the line the same day, and Joe Hudon, who finished in the money twice without a victory, are tied for second place with Willie Urquhart.

A total of 1,158 fans Wednesday wagered $70,666, an increase of $7,543 over the previous Wednesday and $13,690 over the first Wednesday.

ANNUAL Y-TIMES TRACK MEET AT WEEKEND

Another Great Show

Organizers have finally finished sorting and tabulating the flood of entries and what just about everybody had been expecting is now official.

The annual Y-Times track and field meet that goes Saturday and Sunday at Centennial Stadium is going to be another whopper.

Long one of the largest meets in the country, the Y-Times track fiesta usually attracts more than 900 athletes for open and age-class competition. By setting qualifying standards and limiting "B" class events in midget, bantam and peewee division to British Columbia contestants, meet officials keep trying to keep the number of entrants under the 1,000 mark.

They have failed again.

They are not actually unhappy about having a few more youngsters than plans called for joining in the fun, because the surplus once again proves the popularity of their annual presentation. And, after all, the meet is designed to encourage and offer development opportunities to youngsters.

So now they have 1,060 contestants listed and the stage is set for boys and girls to start their pursuits of medals, ribbons and, perhaps, records at 9 Saturday morning.

Competition will continue through Saturday until about 8:30 p.m. and resume Sunday at 10 a.m. with the open 3,000-metre walk, an event that was introduced last year. Action should be brisk following the walk until the meet ends Sunday around 5 p.m.

While the majority of contestants are from British Columbia clubs, the Calgary Thunderbolts will provide an Alberta contingent and several groups are entered from Washington and Oregon clubs.

Among the Americans rated as outstanding performers is high-jumper Julie Cosgrove, who will be competing in the open women's division for the Falcon Track Club of Issaquah, Wash. Julie's toughest competition could come from Scarlet Vandenbos of Richmond Kajaks.

Another women's open event that promises to be interesting is the 200 metres, which will be contested Cheryl Noble of Victoria Mercuries, Colleen Gibson of Abbotsford and Victoria's Judy Tobacco, the provincial high school 200 and 400-metre champion who is running for Vancouver Olympics.

In the juvenile women's section, Peggy Nelson of Esquimalt could wage a duel in the 1,500 metres with Caroline Wallis, the provincial high school champ from Vancouver.

Two of the midget women's events that could produce stirring struggles between Pat Wellman of Victoria Flying Y and Kari Jonassen from the always-strong Eastside, Wash., squad are the 800 and 1,500-metre races.

Sprinters, who include Linda Martin of the Y, Eastside's Meagan Dewey and Tamiko Munro of Lake Oswego TC, Ore., could grab the spotlight in the peewee girls' section.

Terry Bateman, the Flying Y winner of a 3,000-metre steeplechase event at Richmond Tuesday, looms as a runner to watch in the juvenile men's 1,500 and 3,000 metres, Trevor McRae of the same club should be tough to beat in bantam sprints and Ken Wilmshurst of Mercuries rates as a strong contender in the peewee boys' 800 metres.

Those, of course, are just some of the talented athletes competing in the Y-Times meet. There are many more and they'll all be on view Saturday and Sunday at Centennial Stadium, bidding for honors in a host of events.

"What made you give up the 'fight game'?"

Tagge Ignites B.C. Comeback

OTTAWA (CP) — History repeated itself Wednesday as quarterback Jerry Tagge engineered a masterful come-from-behind 21-20 victory for British Columbia Lions over Ottawa Rough Riders in a Canadian Football League exhibition game.

Tagge duplicated a feat he performed here in a regular-season game last year by guiding his team to victory with one second remaining on the scoreboard clock.

He passed seven yards to split end Al Charuk and 26 yards to flanker Leon Bright for touchdowns with less than 90 seconds remaining in the game to make the score 20-19 for Ottawa.

But instead of settling for a tie with a kicked convert, Tagge elected to pass to Charuk in the end zone for a two-point convert and victory.

Lui Passaglia accounted for the other B.C. points with field goals of 21 and 48 yards and a convert of Charuk's touchdown.

Ottawa, which controlled the game throughout the first three quarters, got touchdowns from tight end Tony Gabriel on a 22-yard pass from quarterback Tom Clements and from Peter Stennerson on a 14-yard pass from alternate quarterback Condredge Holloway.

Rookie kicker J. T. Hay kicked field goals of 29 and 37 yards and converted both touchdowns to the delight of 16,100 fans.

Clements dominated the first half along with Gabriel. Clements was good on 13 of 19 pass attempts for 194 yards while Gabriel caught eight of them for 141 yards and his touchdown. In the second second half Holloway was good on 10 of 15 passes tried for 109 yards.

On the other side, the Lions got five completions in 12 tries from rookie Joe Paopao for 57 yards before Gary Keithley took over to complete two of eight passes for 24 yards.

Tagge completed 15 of 28 passes tried for 186 yards, but also threw the team's lone interception.

Bright was the top Lion receiver with five catches for 89 yards.

The Lions ran for 85 yards while the Riders went 127. Top rusher in the game was Richard Holmes of Ottawa with 43 yards on seven carries while Calvin Culliver paced the B.C. ground game with 26 yards on five carries.

The victory was the second of the exhibition season for the Lions and the loss was the first for. the Riders in two outings.

Both Duos From Burnside

Burnside supplied both Victoria-area women's pairs representatives for the B.C. lawn bowling championships June 23-25 in New Westminster following play in the Dogwood competition at Victoria West over the weekend.

Marjorie Atherton and Ivy McLeod won one berth by dropping Florence Carpenter and Hazel James of Lakehill 19-18 in an extra end while Leona Peterson and Joan Farnham defeated Majorie Steed and Joan Turner of Canadian Pacific 21-15 to take the other berth.

Randy's Just Dandy

Randy Johnson made the necessary moves on all fronts Wednesday while helping Greaves Movers to a 6-5 decision over Dairy Queen in Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League action at Lambrick Park.

The versatile catcher made several key fielding plays, threw two players out who were trying to steal, drove in two runs with two hits on three trips to the plate, stole bases himself and scored what proved to be the winning run in the seventh inning.

Dairy Queen had pulled off a triple play to halt a Greaves rally in the sixth inning and then went ahead 5-4 in the top of the seventh.

More Canadians choose Five Star than any other five-year old rye. Because it's a naturally smooth, naturally great tasting whisky.

CHAMPION IN TROUBLE ONCE AGAIN

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — World heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks was arrested early Wednesday in Jacksonville and charged with driving without a licence and operating a vehicle with an expired registration.

Spinks was taken before a magistrate, where he paid a fine and court costs totaling $52.

Spinks, 24, was arrested last April in St. Louis and charged with possession of one-hundredth of a gram of cocaine and a small quantity of marijuana.

On March 19 he was arrested for driving without a licence and driving the wrong way on a one-way street in St. Louis.

Doubles Compound Problem

It happens at the end of every Victoria Times Public Parks tennis tournament.

The contestants, particularly the victorious ones, are happy with the way things have gone but they ask us why we don't have more doubles events.

For the first two years we withstood the pressure and stuck with four singles contests. And then in the third year we weakened and added a mixed doubles event.

Well that did it, I fear. Arranging singles matches for so many players in a tournament that runs all summer produces a giant headache. Trying to organize matches involving any more than two players reduces one to a basket case!

We'd often been asked to add men's and women's doubles to our tourney, the largest tennis event on Vancouver Island. We went with mixed doubles because we figured most of the pairs would be husbands and wives and therefore would know where their partners are.

Don't you believe it!

The onset of summer has such a magnificent freeing effect that people seem to take off in all directions and no one seems to know where anyone is.

Such is the trouble we've encountered already scrambling through a couple of rounds in the mixed doubles that it seems popular practice to enter the Times tourney and then disappear.

We've had little trouble really getting through 64 matches in the huge men's singles draw of 128 players, yet we've run into all sorts of problems with less than half that number in the doubles.

Twice we've had to extend the deadline for second-round doubles matches. And still they didn't all come in. A couple had to win by default because they simply couldn't find their opponents and in one match scheduled, neither couple has turned up!

Finally, that one got us down so we've had to get tough and eliminate the pairings of Peter Harrison and Shirley Mow and Ross and Janet King. They are out and that gives Margaret Snee and Paul Tiessen (who scored a thrilling 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 second-round win over Warren and Marie Erhart) a bye through to the quarter-finals.

Sorry about that you other people but we've got a lot of matches to get through to reduce the fields in all four events to the semi-finals in time for our big windup Aug. 19 and 20 at Oak Bay's Henderson Park.

And so now you know why we don't have men's and women's doubles events as well . . . .

Caroline's Wedding Just Family Affair

MONTE CARLO — The guest list for next week's wedding of Monaco's Princess Caroline and French businessman-playboy Philippe Junot glitters with royalty and celebrity — but there is a distinctly common touch as well.

The 300 guests at the wedding breakfast will include all Monaco citizens born the same year as Caroline, 1957 — about 50 contemporaries in all.

All 4,600 citizens of Monaco are invited to the garden party that will follow the civil wedding on Wednesday.

In addition, schoolchildren will have a day off on the Friday after the wedding so they can enjoy a long weekend.

The stated aim of Caroline and her parents, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, is to make the occasion not a state wedding but a family affair.

But it will be a family affair with a lavish touch.

Marc Bohan of the Paris fashion house of Dior designed all three of Caroline's dresses for the occasion: the ball gown and the wedding dresses she will wear for the civil and religious ceremonies.

The ball gown is an ankle-length Empire dress of white tulle, embroidered with sequins, with a shawl of the same material. Caroline's dress for the civil ceremony, short-sleeved and three-quarter length, is of softly pleated ice-blue Georgette crepe with open-work seams.

SNOOP SHOT AWARD

PARIS — A photograph showing the naked breasts of Princess Caroline of Monaco cost the publishers of the Italian magazine Oggi 10,000 francs ($2,200) in damages. The court ordered Rizzoli Editore to pay 5,000 francs each to the princess and to her father, Prince Rainier. Last September the magazine published a photograph of the princess taken with a telephoto lense.

TEAMSTER BOSS JAILED FOR LIFE

KINGSTON — New Jersey Teamster boss Athony (Tony Pro) Provenzano and co-defendant Harold Konigsberg were sentenced to life in prison on Wednesday for the premeditated strangulation of a Teamster union rival 17 years ago.

The prosecutor, Michael Kavanagh, said he hopes the convictions will lead to a break in the Jimmy Hoffa case. Provenzano has been mentioned by authorities in connection with the 1975 disappearance of the former Teamsters' president.

In this case, Provenzano was convicted of masterminding the murder of Anthony (Three Fingers Tony) Castellito, who was lured to Konigsberg's summer home in Kerhonkson on the pretext that someone wanted to hide out there.

Konigsberg, 49, was convicted of helping to strangle Castellito with a piano wire in exchange for $15,000.

In handing down the sentences, Judge John Clyne of Ulster county court noted that in 1961, when the murder was committed, the mandatory sentence for murder was death, amended two years later to mandatory life imprisonment. He sentenced them under the 1963 statutes.

Provenzano and Konigsberg, both convicted last week of first-degree murder although Castellito's body has never been found, will not be eligible for parole until after 26 years and eight months in prison.

A third defendant, Salvatore Briguglio, was gunned down gangland-style last March as he left a restaurant in Manhattan's Little Italy.

Provenzano's appeals lawyer, John Pollock, said he would file a notice of appeal immediately, and Konigsberg's lawyer, Ivan Fisher, has said previously that he would challenge the conviction.

NEW YORK — Adolf Hitler and homosexual rights opponent Anita Bryant have "done the most damage to the world," a poll of high school students by the Ladies Home Journal shows.

Most of the 800 junior and senior high school students surveyed said Miss Bryant and former U.S. president Richard Nixon "make them angriest."

Abraham Lincoln and Eleanor Roosevelt have "done the most good for the world," the students said, and Bob Hope and Carol Burnett bring "the most laughter to the world."

POPE MARKS ANNIVERSARY

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul marked the 15th anniversary of his election to the papacy Wednesday, a stormy pontificate that a Vatican newspaper described as a "crucified life" struggling with such issues as birth control and modernization of the church.

The 80-year-old Pope used his his weekly general audience to again call for a ban on nuclear arms.

Loving Dentist Guilty

NEW YORK — Manhattan dentist Marvin Teicher was found guilty Wednesday of sexually abusing a young female undercover investigator who made an appointment with him after three women complained to police they had body soreness after they awoke from sedation in the dentist's office.

Judge Dorothy Cropper said she found Teicher's explanation of his actions "contrived, self serving and completely unconvincing."

He had testified that two of the women must have hallucinated about sexual contact while under general sedation. And, he said, his treatment of undercover investigator Dorothy Beineix was proper — that he held her in a bear hug and rhythmically squeezed her because she was having trouble breathing.

House Can't Get Over the Hump

The case of the quarantined camels came up in the legislature Wednesday.

It left MLAs wondering if it is easier to get a camel through the eye of a needle than through the gates of Chilliwack.

It seems municipalities throughout the province can get provincial grants for Capt. Cook festivities and Chilliwack decided to use the money to rent two racing camels for a parade.

But the camels ended up in quarantine — a situation that created an oasis of hilarity in the all too often dry desert of debate in the legislatue.

Eileen Dailly (NDP-Burnaby North) told the legislature the rental for the racing camels was $2,000 but because of the quarantine, they missed the parade.

"Does the minister condone camels on the government payroll?" Mrs. Dailly asked Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, who is responsible for the Capt. Cook festivities.

Mrs. McCarthy replied that she wasn't certain if Capt. Cook Bicentennial money was used on the camels.

But MLAs weren't really listening as they tossed one-liners back and forth:

"Will that be one hump or two?"

"I thought they were dromedaries."

"Shame on you George," (to George Haddad, Socred MLA from Kootenay who is proud of his Arab ancestry.)

Finally amid camel-like grunts from some members, Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver Centre) rose to his feet decrying the levity in the house.

"Is it true four out of five Chilliwackians prefer camels?" he said when he finally got silence.

"I'd walk a kilometer for a camel," the heavy-smoking Mackenzie NDP MLA Don Lockstead was reported to have said.

NURSERY FUNDS FOR HOSPITALS

Victoria's two hospitals will get additional government funding to set up special care nurseries to care for sick children and their mothers.

The regional treatment centres — also in Prince George, Kamloops and New Westminster — will not require major renovations but by 1981 Prince George and Victoria will have new family oriented obstetrical suites, Health Minister Bob McClelland said Wednesday.

When the new Helmcken Hospital is complete, the Victoria General nursery unit will move to the new facility.

The intention of the program is to upgrade B.C.'s perinatal services," McClelland said.

"Special skills and equipment will be concentrated in a few, easy-to-reach centres because staff cannot maintain the necessary expertise unless they have frequent exposure to problem cases."

Severe cases will be taken to the specialty care centre in Vancouver currently in the general hospital but soon to be moved to the new Children's Hospital.

Minister Admits Squeeze on Aged

A complaint by a Victoria man that income assistance for some older people has not increased in 30 months years is partly true, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm has admitted.

Leslie Priestley, of 1321 Broad, wrote the Times saying that people depending on income assistance have suffered considerable reductions in their purchasing power becaue of inflation.

Vander Zalm said in an interview that the Guaranteed Available Income for Need (GAIN) for seniors over age 65 has increased from $245 a month in 1976 to $310 monthly today.

"But if he (Priestley) was referring to the 60 to 64 age group, the increment has not been as much," the minister said.

That age group has seen only a $20 per month increase over the same time period.

But there is also a $50 shelter average allowance available for that age group, Vander Zalm said.

All welfare rates within the ministry are currently under review with the aim of finding a more equitable system, he said.

A preliminary report on the review is already complete, Vander Zalm said. But he wouldn't comment on the recommendations.

Contract To IBM

IBM Canada Ltd. has won a three-year, $3 million contract to provide integrated computer services to the B.C. Systems Corporation, BCSC president D. A. Alexander said Wednesday.

Alexander said in a news release that IBM will provide a computer which, after conversion of existing systems during the next nine months, will replace four IBM computers currently being used by the Crown corporation.

Deputy Named

Christopher Owen Gray has been appointed assistant deputy minister of housing, Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Wednesday. The appointment fills the vacancy created by George Chatterton's retirement earlier this year.

'Broc-Olive' Zippy Dip

Broccoli goes "broc-olive" in this unique idea that's worthy of centre stage on your next buffet table. It's a variation of a favorite dip that fits easily into a casual party scheme or a more formal buffet setting.

Either way Zippy Broc-Olive Dip is a North Americanized version of the Mexican taste you'd find in chile co queso. Here the bright green of crunchy broccoli replaces the green of chili peppers, and ripe olives from California add their own color touch and special nutty taste. Process American cheese, the type that melts smoothly and easily, pulls both those flavors together with a little crushed red pepper adding just the right amount of "bite."

This is the perfect dip because it is a good flavor accent for a variety of "dippers" — tortilla triangles or squares, corn chips, fresh vegetables, even bread cubes to give it a fondue flair. It's served warm to highlight the full blending of flavors.

ZIPPY BROC-OLIVE DIP

1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped broccoli, thawed and well-drained

1 pound pasteurized processed cheese, cubed

½ teaspoon crushed red pepper, or to taste

1 cup ripe olives, coarsely chopped

Combine broccoli, cheese, crushed red pepper and olives in medium saucepan. Place over low heat to melt cheese, stirring occasionally. Transfer to fondue pot or chafing dish and keep warm. Serve with corn chips, tortilla squares, fresh vegetables or large whole ripe olives for dipping.

VARIATION: If desired, serve warm in fondue pot with bread cubes as cheese fondue.

LET BIOSCAL®

HELP KEEP YOUR HAIR!

Finnish scientists have developed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

Among volunteers who applied the formula to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The product, called Bioscal, contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hair and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which has resulted in the growth of new hair. If not available (at your hairdresser or stylist, obtain yours at

IF YOU'RE DIETING FORGET THE BEER

QUESTION: I am now on a 1,200-calorie weight reduction diet but am used to enjoying a glass of cold beer during hot summer days. Can I include beer in my diet?

ANSWER: It is important that when you are limiting your food intake, you eat foods that will supply your body with the many nutrients it needs daily. Beer and alcoholic beverages provide primarily calories and it is interesting to note that one gram of alcohol yields seven calories while one gram of protein or carbohydrate yields only four calories. A 12-ounce glass of beer contains 150 calories which is similar to the number of calories found, for example, in a 3-ounce portion of lean beef. Meat, however, provides your body with such nutrients as protein, iron and the vitamin B complex, which are only found in minute amounts or not at all in beer. Beer is basically a poor source of nutrients and therefore should not be included in your diet.

QUESTION: My garden is full of rhubarb now and I am serving it to my family often as other fruits are still expensive. What nutrients does it contain?

ANSWER: Rhubarb provides vitamins A and C and small amounts of calcium, potassium, and magnesium. It is a boon to calorie counters as it contains so few calories raw. One-half cup of raw rhubarb contains only 16 calories. However, when cooking it, people tend to add too much sugar which increases the calories to 200 per half-cup. Try to add no more than one-half cup of sugar, to each 4 cups of prepared fruit. This way you can enjoy the lovely tart flavor of the fruit. Another plus for rhubarb is that it is a good source of fibre. You said you are using rhubarb often in your menus, try adding a few strawberries that are in season now, and then raspberries when they are available. These fruits add color and interest to rhubarb. It is a very versatile fruit and you can find many ways to serve it to your family, for breakfast, as dessert, in puddings sauces, pies, tarts, marmalade, relish or chutney.

QUESTION: I am confused. I've heard so much about "health foods" lately. Could you please tell me, just what is a "health food"?

ANSWER: There really is no such thing as a "health food". There is not any one magic food that will lead to good health. The important thing is to eat a balanced diet that contains all the nutrients needed by the body. Canada's Food Guide, available from your local health unit office provides you with guidelines for a balanced diet.

Eggplant Fills Variety Bill

Experts agree that a good meal consists of a protein food (meat, poultry, fish) a carbohydrate food such as rice, and a vegetable. But that format can be varied without taking away from the nutrition of the meal. For instance, why not try cooking rice and a vegetable together? Many times the combination, properly seasoned, tastes better than the two foods cooked separately.

Eggplant Skillet Deluxe is an example of this idea. Eggplant is a popular food, available all year ... as is rice. But eggplant recipes generally are a bit more involved. You just can't boil it whole and put it on a plate. And there are those who feel that rice is better if a few more ingredients are added to it. The solution? Combine the rice and eggplant. Then add seasonings to compliment both. It saves time and energy — your energy and that used for cooking.

So, for ways to add mealtime interest, the following rice-vegetable combinations will fill the bill. And they will encourage family members to eat vegetables, too, because the dishes taste so good.

Rice fits into many different meal situations. It's economical (at just pennies per serving), stores easily on the shelf (ready at a moment's notice to be included in the meal), and supplies the important carbohydrates needed for a well-balanced diet.

EGGPLANT SKILLET DELUXE

1 cup sliced green onions with tops
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Each serving provides: (for 6 servings) 156 calories, ½ meat exchange, 1 bread exchange, 1 fat exchange, 1¼ vegetable exchanges (for 8 servings) 117 calories, ½ meat exchange, ¾ bread exchange, ¾ fat exchange, 1 vegetable exchange.

¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Thaw, drain, and separate spinach. Toss with rice. Combine eggs, soup, and seasonings. Stir into spinach mixture. Turn into a greased shallow 2½-quart casserole. Sprinkle top with Parmesan cheese. Bake at 350°F. for 30 minutes or until firm. Makes 6 to 8 servings. Good with pot roast, broiled pork chops, or barbecued frankfurters.

Each serving provides: (for 6 servings) 20 calories, 1 meat exchange, 1⅓ bread exchanges, 1 fat exchange, ⅔ vegetable exchange (for 8 servings) 172 calories, ¾ meat exchange, 1 bread exchange, 1 fat exchange, ½ vegetable exchange.

Makes 6 to 8 servings. Serve with smoked sausage, meat loaf, or Veal Marsala.

Bio-dex

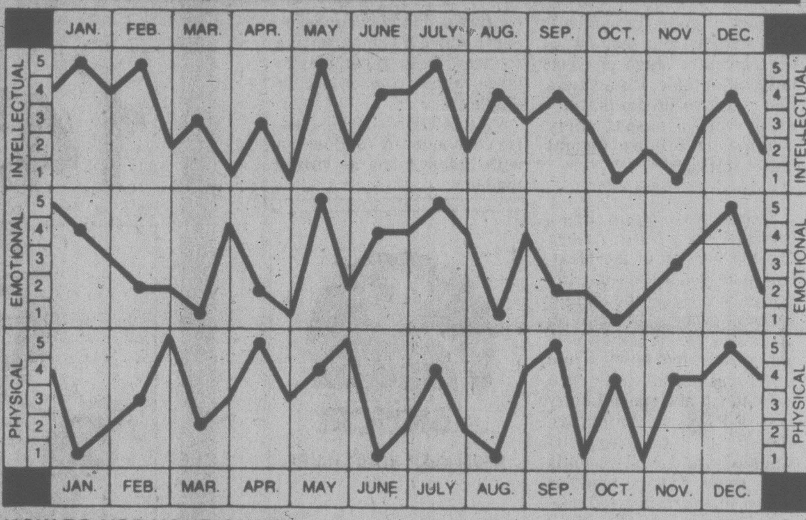
©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978
Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	If you really must have that special treat, ask nicely rather than demanding it.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	Buying new clothes can give you a lift but you need more. Re-establish a friendship.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	Your body feels like a high-quality clock and you're itching to test its limits. Don't go wild.

Your limitations may be directly affected by your low Bio-dex readout. On a low cycle you tend to resign yourself more easily to the limits imposed by the world around you. You may opt out of a new venture that requires expansion into new areas. What's important is to be aware of your negative thinking. Know your enemy and laugh in its face.

EDUCATION PAYS - REPORT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most men with college educations have incomes nearly twice that of those who drop out in high school or before, a report issued by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says.

HEW also said men still earn higher salaries than women with comparable educations, the college enrolment rate is slowing down and Americans generally rate public schools better than other public services such as fire and police protection, hospitals and transportation.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive girl who likes sports, and I'm exceptionally good at them. When I compete with a man I usually win, but it's a bitter victory because from then on, the fellow I beat promptly loses interest in me — romantically.

It happens every time, Abby. When a man competes with me and loses, his ego takes a beating, and no man is inclined to get turned on by a woman who's athletically superior to him.

I would like a romance, but I also like to win. Will romance ever bloom if I keep winning? To lose a game or lose a boyfriend — that's the choice. What do you say? — LIKES TO WIN.

DEAR LIKES: Always play to win. A real man will enjoy the challenge. And those who would lose interest in you romantically because they lost aren't men, they're crybabies.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 3-year-old daughter whom we adore. We were unable to have more children, so we adopted "A" — a 2-year-old girl who had been in several foster homes before we got her.

The problem is that we honestly don't feel the same about "A" as we do about our own child. "A" whines constantly and seems generally dissatisfied and contrary. (When I'm holding her she wants "down," and when she's down she whines until I pick her up.)

Our own child is always co-operative and lovable. My husband and I feel guilty for our thoughts. Is it natural for parents to favor their own child over one who's adopted? And can parents be blamed for favoring the child who's more co-operative and lovable?

I can't sign this for obvious reasons, but I need to know if other adoptive parents feel as we do? And what can be done about it. — FEELING GUILTY.

DEAR FEELING: Whether the child is your own flesh and blood or adopted, the least lovable child is the one who needs your love the most. Don't feel guilty for honest emotions. Ask the agency from which you received the adopted child if they provide counselling for this problem. (It's not uncommon.)

Sharing your experiences and feelings with other parents who have learned how to deal with "unlovable children" can bring blessed relief. And please let me know the outcome. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at the neighborhood beauty shop which I patronized for years, I was irked by the new operator who did my hair. She did a good job, but when she finished, she said, "That will be $10, plus $2 for the tip."

Is it accepted procedure in some areas to state the tip expected? I have never encountered this before and it annoyed me. Unless you tell me that I am off centre here, I plan to speak to the manager about this. Perhaps it's a new policy. — PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED: Although customs may differ in different areas, I know of no area where it's "accepted procedure" to ask for a tip for ANY service.

$65m Bid For Dior?

PARIS (AP) — Cartier, the internationally-known jeweller, is willing to bid $65 million for the Christian Dior fashion empire, Cartier's managing director, Robert Hoch, said Tuesday.

French textile magnate Marcel Boussac, 89, has offered to sell his huge personal assets, which include Dior, the Paris newspapers L'Aurore and Paris Turf, seven chateaux, about 8,000 apartments and 300 company houses, to refinance his bankrupt textile business.

French banks which have been pouring funds into the textile group so far have not approved Boussac's proposals.

The textile group was placed in the hands of receivers May 30.

Hoch said Cartier has not yet made any direct offer to buy Dior France and Dior International, but the firm is ready to study with the receivers "a way to avoid dismantling Dior."

The Dior perfume subsidiary was sold in 1972 to the Moet et Chandon champagne company.

The Boussac textile group employs about 11,000 workers with an annual turnover of about $174 million.

The Dior group was founded by Christian Dior in 1947 and became one of France's most famous fashion houses. Dior died in 1957 and Boussac, who had acquired a controlling interest, appointed chief designer Marc Bohan as head of the fashion house.

Dior employs 800 workers and had a 1977 turnover of $100 million.

B.C. Believes

VANCOUVER (CP) — A telephone poll showed that about 74 per cent of British Columbians believe in extrasensory powers, and that generally, women more often believe in monsters, extrasensory powers and supernatural beings while men are more likely to believe in water creatures, flying saucers and visitors from outer space.

FROZEN FOOD: DON'T DALLY

When you're buying frozen foods, always check display cases to see that the foods are kept below the "frostline" or "load line", the line marked on commercial freezer cabinets which indicates the safety level. Don't buy products that have been stored above this line.

When preparing frozen foods, always read labels carefully. Many will tell you that you should not try to refreeze a product. You might decide on a frozen food item for dinner, put it in the refrigerator to thaw, then decide later you want to use some other item instead. Do not try to refreeze food unless the label states it is safe to do so.

Always plan ahead so you will have time to defrost frozen foods in the refrigerator.

Don't take frozen foods from the freezer and leave them to thaw at room temperature for long hours — they could easily spoil and cause food poisoning.

THIS BREAD'S FIRST-RATE

Mary Moore

Raisin Orange Bread should be described as a sweet dough product but since it has only ¼ cup (plus 1 tsp.) of sugar in it, it is not all that sweet.

It might be compared to a raisin loaf for the uses to which you will put it.

When you serve this to your family or at a coffee party your baking reputation will rise by leaps and bounds.

RAISIN ORANGE BREAD

(yeast, tube or bundt pan)
1 pkg. granular yeast (1 tbsp.)
⅓ cup lukewarm water
1 tsp. granulated sugar (first amount)
½ cup milk
⅓ cup butter
¼ cup granulated sugar (second amount)
1 tsp. salt
rind and juice from 1 extra large orange (approximately 2 tbsp. rind and 2 to 3 tbsp. juice)
1½ cups raisins (preferably bleached)
1 egg
3 to 3½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour (divided — see below)

In a one-cup measure dissolve the 1 teaspoon sugar in the lukewarm water. Sprinkle over yeast and let stand 10 minutes. Stir once.

Meanwhile heat and stir milk, butter, sugar and salt in a small pan until warm to the touch and butter melts and sugar and salt are dissolved. Pour into a large bowl.

Stir in yeast liquid, orange rind and juice, raisins, egg and 2 cups of the flour. Blend then beat until smooth and elastic — about 50 strokes. Add 1 cup more flour and work into dough. Turn out on a lightly floured board and knead until smooth and elastic — 250 times. If dough becomes sticky, sprinkle over some of the remaining half cup flour and knead in. (I used 3¼ cups flour in all.)

Place dough in large greased bowl and rotate to grease all surfaces. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled — about 1½ hours. Punch down dough and turn out on LIGHTLY floured board and knead 100 times. Return to bowl, cover and let rest 10 minutes. Shape dough into a 19" roll which is just long enough to surround centre tube of a greased 12-cup bundt or tube pan. Press ends snugly together. (NOTE: You may use your tube pan with removable centre if necessary.) Let rise uncovered, until doubled — about 1 hour.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 35 to 40 minutes or until when bread is tapped it sounds hollow. Remove from oven and immediately brush surface with melted butter. Let stand in pan no longer than three minutes then remove from pan and cool on cake rack.

Lovely to serve at a coffee or tea party.

SOY MILK DEVELOPED

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican researchers have developed "soy milk," which they say is cheaper and more nourishing than cow's milk.

A spokesman for the University of the Americas, just north of the colonial city of Puebla, said one pound of soy beans can produce about 2 quarts of milk, with flour to spare.

Soy milk's marketing cost is estimated at about 15 cents a quart without added flavoring, and about 17 cents with strawberry, chocolate or other flavors.

Soy milk can be used to make other dairy products such as cheese, cream, yogurt and butter. It can also be stored without refrigeration for up to two months.

Obesity: Now We Know

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I know of no one who is not battling the problem of being overweight. I've often wondered why we can't be like our grandparents and great-grandparents. They were able to enjoy rich foods without worrying about it. — Mrs. E.E.R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

They probably didn't worry about it because they didn't know that obesity was a severe nutritional problem that interferes with optimal health and decreases longevity. Osteoarthritis, high blood pressure, gallbladder disease, heart and vascular disorders, arteriosclerosis, diabetes and strokes are all related, directly or indirectly, to obesity. And these represent a fraction of the interplay between all the organs of the body as they are altered by exessive weight.

No, obesity is not a disease of modern civilization. But its recognition as a disease reflects the wisdom of modern civilization.

The Biblical texts of Leviticus and Deuteronomy contain definite references to the causes of overweight. In the Scriptures it states, "He begins by riding high, then he overeats sweets and fats. To this is added sheep's milk, fat lamb's meat, juicy wheat kernels, kidney fat and delicious wine from the juice of blood-red grapes."

More than 3,000 years ago, three basic forms of obesity were described. The first noted "his skin became greasy and waxy and he became fat all over." The second stated, "he became blown up, pasty and swollen." The third added, "he became covered with overhanging folds of fat."

Finally, it was astutely stated in the Bible that "he became disgusting before the Lord."

This is a pretty good profile of all the physical, chemical, nutritional, emotional, social, metabolic and psychological implicatons of overweight and obesity. Incidentally, there is a difference between the two. Overweight is excessive, burdensome weight. Obesity suggests corpulence and the accumulaton of excessive fat.

Perhaps years ago, there were no social stigmatizing effects of obesity. Today, because of our awareness of good health standards, everyone wants to maintain an ideal weight. When your great-grandmother downed a portion of delicious homemade banana-cream pie and a cup of hot chocolate topped with whipped cream, she had no qualms about it. It never occured to her that those extra calories were contributing to her high blood pressure.

Today we know better. And this accounts for the fact that everyone you know is battling the problem of overweight. It's a battle worth winning, no matter how hard the struggle. Your very life may be at stake.

SPEAKING OR YOUR HEALTH . . . Emotional exhaustion must always be considered in the understanding of body fatigue.

'BRADY BUNCH' UNREAL

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Many step-parents feel they have to have a Brady Bunch relationship with their step-children, says a Kitchener behavior consultant, "but this is a non-realistic expectation."

Peter Birch told a group of step-parents at a semnar that they should not accept total responsibility for building a relationship between themselves and their step-children.

Step-parents "often fail to realize that step-children may have different expectations from theirs."

Birch advised step-parents to let their new spouse's children take half the responsibility in developing a relationship or they will do them an injustice.

"Let the kids come up with some solution if a relationship between you is not happening," he said. "And drop the assumption that kids are not capable of solving their own problems — they are."

Broker Leaves Husky Oil Board

CALGARY (UPI) — Ward C. Pitfield, head of the investment house that handled PetroCanada's bid to takeover Husky Oil Ltd., has resigned as a director of Husky, company chairman Glenn Nielson announced Wednesday.

Pitfield submitted his resignation after Nielson said it was a "shock and surprise" to learn Pitfield also headed Pitfield, McKay, Ross, the Toronto based firm that represented PetroCan in its offers to takeover Husky.

Occidental Petroleum Corp., and PetroCan are in a corporate battle for control of Husky's assets.

The federal justice department is looking into charges Husky and Occidental were "in collusion" to drive up the value of Husky shares. The American, Toronto and Montreal stock exchanges are trying to determine whether "inside information" resulted in a surge in the value of Husky shares in the week before trading was halted.

Blue Ribbon Ribbing

OTTAWA (CP) — Average Canadians should help decide what to do with senators displaced under new reform legislation, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent has quipped.

It is proposed the Senate be replaced by a House of the Federation appointed half by provinces and half by the Commons.

Tongue in cheek, Broadbent said the committee should be comprised of "one corporation lawyer to act in the interests of the existing senators, two fishermen, two farmers, two miners and two factory workers."

OPTION EVIDENCE

MONTREAL (CP) — Another witness at the trial of Liberal Senator Louis Giguere has testified that Giguere was given a "verbal option" on 5,000 shares of Sky Shops Export Ltd. some years before he bought the shares for $1 each in 1972.

Clarence Campbell, former president of the National Hockey League and a former Sky Shops executive, said Wednesday he okayed the option in 1968 after now-deceased businessman Louis Lapointe had approached him.

Giguere is charged with conspiring to have extended the company's lease at a Dorval airport shop.

Mail-Opening Attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Roman Catholic bishops have sent a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau and Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais urging withdrawal of a bill that would give police the legal right to open first-class mail.

Most Rev. Adolph Proulx, Bishop of Hull, and Most Rev. Bernard Hubert, Bishop of St. Jean de Quebec, made the representation on behalf of the national organization for Canada's 116 Catholic bishops.

Quebec Passes James Bay Bills

QUEBEC (CP) — Three bills bringing parts of the James Bay native land settlement into effect received approval early today from a committee of the Quebec national assembly over the objections of dissident Inuit representatives and Parti Quebecois MNAs.

A bill establishing the Cree Region Authority to look after funds received under the settlement and another measure extending the agreement to cover the Nascapi Indians of Schefferville, near the Labrador border, received quick approval — but only after a long wrangle over the third bill, setting up the Makivik Corp. to administer the $100 million the province is to pay the Inuit (Eskimo) people of northern Quebec under the agreement.

Inuit TV Plan Okayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal communications department has approved an Inuit plan to use the new Anik B satellite for northern television broadcasting.

Inuit Tapirisat, the national Eskimo brotherhood, said in a press release Wednesday it will be allowed to use the satellite during the last six months of 1980. It said it plans to broadcast Inuit-produced programs in Inuktitut, the Inuit language, and to conduct a number of communications experiments.

CRTC Grants Radio Station To Old Crow

OTTAWA (CP) — Old Crow, Yukon, one of the oldest known human settlements, is to get its own radio station, the Canadian Radio-television and Communications Commission announced Wednesday.

The Loucheaux Indian community of 206 residents is to have a 10-watt station primarily to rebroadcast the CBC's Northern Service via the Canadian Communications Satellite. It will be operated by the Old Crow Community Club.

Old Crow, located 75 miles within the Arctic Circle, dates back 30,000 years.

"Hello, Mommy? Could I have a banana?"

The Bridge Expert

When today's deal was played in the Vanderbilt Cup Championship of 1978, West had a problem as to what to lead against South's slam contract. In the postmortem analysis it was revealed that there was just one lead that could beat the slam. But West couldn't find it — and neither could a half-dozen experts to whom the deal was presented as a problem.

North-South vulnerable.
South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

3 ♣	3 ♠	4♠	Dble
Pass	Pass	Rdble.	Pass
6 ♣	Dble.	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	Dble.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

The bidding warrants some discussion. When North "cue-bid" spades, the suit that East and West had bid, he was telling his partner that he had first-round control of spades. When East doubled this bid and North subsequently redoubled, North confirmed his original statement; and at the same time stated that he was well prepared to play the hand at five clubs or five diamonds. When West doubled the six-club bid, North, quite naturally bid six diamonds, which West also doubled.

What to lead from the West hand posed a problem. When the deal was actually played, West opened the heart king. South ruffed this lead and promptly led a club. West took his king and shifted to a spade. But it was a belated shift.

Dummy's ace won the trick, after which South cased his ace and king of trumps. Then came the club queen, West covered with the ace, and dummy ruffed. The South hand was then re-entered via the queen of trumps, and South cashed his establised club suit, discarding thereon dummy's two remaining spades. South then ruffed his queen of spades, for his slam-going trick.

The only opening lead that could defeat the slam was a spade. Had this lead been made, East's king would become a winner; and when West subsequently obtained the lead with a top club, he would lead another spade to East's king.

And so, on this given day, the lead of partner's bid suit (spades) would have turned out to be the winning one. But with West's hand, plus the appreciation that East had been forced to bid, I don't think that it could be called the right lead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on personal possessions, income potential, getting what you need, adding to special collection. Dare to pioneer; take a chance on your own creative talents, capabilities. Yes, Leo is a true ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be confident, take initiative, trust yourself, highlight independence, originality. Make personal appearances, be a self-starter. Rise above petty envy, objections based on immaturity, whining, singing the blues. You're going places. Don't drag a "drag." Means be free of constant complainer.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Probe behind the scenes. Be versatile, give full rein to intellectual curiosity. Attend social affair. Make contacts. Adapt to changing conditions. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. You will gain access to needed information.

Leave the Suckers Alone

The culture of black currant bushes has been revised and changed during the past century. Home gardeners realize this when the instructions given in a fruit growing book published around 1880 is compared with the same type of book put out in 1965.

Whenever cultural changes are found necessary, either for the good of the plants themselves or to increase the production of fruits or flowers, the gardener is faced with conflicting advice from other gardeners.

Older gardeners rigidly follow methods learned during their apprenticeship. When you read a "Head Gardener's Handbook" you soon realize that any head gardener who deviated from the beliefs of the day would very soon be dismissed.

Sucker growths coming from the buried portion of a tree or shrub were considered evidence of a gardener's incompetence.

Referring to the culture of black currants, the handbooks warned that all shoots coming through the soil must be removed at point of origin before being spotted by the owner of the garden.

If bushes persisted in making sucker growths, the handbook recommended they should be lifted and all growth buds on the portion of stock below soil level removed.

This resulted in black currants being grown on a "clean leg," a short stem or trunk with the lowest branches 10 or 12 inches above soil level.

To obtain a "clean leg," 10-inch cuttings taken after leaf-fall had all growth buds removed from the leaf axils that would be below ground, which was usually the lower 5 or 6 inches of the cutting.

Since black currants bear fruit on new growths made after fruiting the previous season, a branch system, similar to an apple or pear tree, had to be built to carry this new wood, and pruning methods were carefully designed to encourage plenty of new wood on the old branches.

Since the bushes could only make a limited amount of growth, production of new wood dwindled with age, and the bushes were considered good for only eight to 10 years. Some old-time gardeners still follow this method of culture.

Today black currant bushes considered best are those which produce new growths from the buried part of the stem, the incriminating sucker growths of the old gardeners.

To obtain these, the growth buds are no longer removed from cuttings and there is no need to spend a year or two building a branch system, nor to study a complicated system of pruning.

Because fruits are borne on new shoots made the previous season — and since these fruited shoots will never again bear a good crop of currants — each one can be cut off with the fruits attached, then taken indoors for stripping.

This method does away with sitting on a stool in hot sun carefully snipping each sprig of fruit with scissors, and it also assures the removal of unwanted wood which is difficult for home gardeners to recognize in spring when red and white currants and gooseberries are pruned.

Gardeners reporting poor currant crops admit their bushes have never been pruned, or all shoots were cut back in spring. This resulted in removal of the wood that should have fruited this year.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Candu Report Irks Gillespie

OTTAWA (CP)-Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said flatly Wednesday that Canada's Candu nuclear reactors are safe.

The minister added, however: "I'm not a technician. I can't say at this precise moment that every system is operating at 100 per cent."

Gillespie was elaborating in an interview on a Commons statement that a published report suggesting deficiencies in the emergency cooling systems at nuclear power plants was "based on misrepresentation and misinformation."

The minister told Allan Lawrence, Conservative energy critic, that the Atomic Energy Control Board (AECB), a regulatory agency under his ministry, has seriously questioned safety procedures of some nuclear equipment. But the minister also said this is no cause for worry.

"That is the proper course for them to take."

Gillespie said the AECB keeps all nuclear systems under continuing review and initiates safety measures whenever it sees a need for improvements.

He said he expects the AECB to add new licensing requirements to its list of safety measures for nuclear systems. They would not be made public until put into effect.

Gillespie accused the Conservatives of giving credence to allegations that nuclear plants are unsafe through their questions in the Commons.

The published report said the emergency coolers for all four of Ontario's nuclear power plans are not performing the full safety function for which they were designed.

It said AECB has recommended these safety standards be lowered to make the existing cooling systems adequate to meet government standards. The board said this change in design standards should be made without public knowledge to avoid a public outcry.

Lawrence accused the minister of making numerous statements in the Commons assuring Canadians all is well, when his own agency's reports indicated there are serious questions about the design and efficiency of safety equipment.

Gillespie said in an interview: "The emergency systems are adequate. If they were't the reactors wouldn't be allowed to operate."

Robert Wenman (PC—Fraser Valley West) asked in the Commons if foreign Candu customers were warned of unsafe reactors. Gillespie reiterated that the Conservatives based their information on press reports that should be not be given credence.

Wenman said in an interview: "Canada has the potential to become a nuclear prostitute by selling what could be dangerous nuclear technology to parts of the world which are not capable of coping with it. It now is coming to light that Canada can't even cope with its own technology."

He said the Conservatives are launching a full-fledged attack on the government on the grounds of an apparent disregard of its own written nuclear safety standards.

"The standards are fine, but are we meeting them?," Wenman said.

Secrets-Charge Threat Reported

OTTAWA (CP) — Bernard Maquire said Wednesday he was permitted to see government files on himself only on condition that he sign of pledge never to divulge what he saw

He said he was warned violation of pledge would result in a charge under the Official Secrets Act.

Maquire's statement at a press conference was the latest revelation in a three-year attempt by the electrical technician to discover the unspecified security reasons used to fire him from Canadian National Telecommunications job in the Yukon.

Progressive Conservative MP Gerald Baldwin, accompanying Maquire, told reporters the secrecy pledge is contained in government regulations that several departments have recently devised. The regulations were conditions for access to personal files allowed under terms of the new Human Rights Act privacy provisions.

Baldwin said the regulations were approved by the cabinet. He said they are horrendous and will be investigated by a Commons committee.

Maquire said he is obliged to keep secret contents of files in the department of supply and services which has jurisdiction over government security clearance.

The 26-year-old man who now is an Edmonton bus driver said he believes he could clear his name if he could divulge information he saw.

Macquire said he suspects that a slur against his character in some file he has not seen might be the key to his case.

Macquire said he was shown the files by S. M. Jenkyns, chief of the security branch of the supply department. As the head civil servant in charge of granting government security clearances, Jenkyns is a central figure in the controversial case of Alexander Peter Treu.

Treu was sentenced last month after a secret trial to two years in prison for violating the secrets act by unauthorized handling of NATO documents. Baldwin has spearheaded a campaign against the trial and Macquire's union cited Treu's case in its statement.

Rescue Plea Undelivered

MONTREAL (CP) — Denis Maschino says the Algerian government has refused to deliver a letter he wrote to President Houari Boumedienne asking for help in arranging a reunion with his Algerian wife, Dalila, allegedly being held captive by her older brother.

The move means Algeria "is refusing to become involved in the problem," Maschino said in an interview.

The 26-year-old Frenchman studying economics here said the Boumedienne letter travelled through diplomatic channels to the Canadian embassy in Algiers. When it was delivered to the Algerian foreign affairs ministry last week, officials there "refused to accept it."

The bizarre affair began in Montreal on the night of April 24-25 when Dalila was allegedly drugged unconscious, whisked off to Algeria on a private jet and taken to her family home in a remote village.

Maschino says the man behind the incident is Dalila's older brother, Messaoud Zeghar, a powerful businessman who is reputed to have been closely associated with Boumedienne since the 1954-62 war for Algeria's independence from France.

The Canadian embassy delivered another letter to Zeghar last week but he has not answered it, Maschino said.

In both letters, Maschino offered to consider the possibility of converting to Islam to arrive at a "friendly settlement" with Zeghar, who was fiercely opposed to his sister's 1975 civil marriage in Paris.

PCs Observers Sense Progress On Disarmament

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The General Assembly's special session on disarmament has left some observers frustrated and angry but others, including two Canadian MPs, say things are being accomplished.

The Two MPs who have been watching the drafting process admit that the pace is slow and deliberate but said they also see progress.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) said in an interview that the assembly has a hard task before it but that some ideas are taking shape.

Dinsdale also said he feels the present body for world disarmament talks, the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament in Geneva, may be reorganized.

That committee is a body sponsored by the United States and the Soviet Union — the joint chairmen — and has been criticized as being dominated by the two superpowers. France has refused to take its seat in the committee and China is not a member.

However, in speaking to the special session, both French President Valery Giscard d'Estaint and Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua indicated their countries would consider taking part in a new disarmament body linked more closely to the UN.

Mike Forrestal, Conservative MP for Dartmouth-Halifax East, said that would be a key step.

Dinsdale said the assembly is wrestling with the fate of the Geneva-committee.

Still Under Attack

PRAGUE (AP) — The newspaper of Czechoslovakia's ruling Communist party says the liberal regime of former party chief Alexander Dubcek planned to set up labor camps for faithful Communists before it was ousted by the Soviet invasion of 1968.

RIGHTS BID INADEQUATE: GAY GROUP

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Gay Rights Coalition, an association of homosexual groups, has condemned Prime Minister Trudeau's proposed charter of human rights and freedoms for not including sexual orientation among the prohibited categories of discrimination.

The charter is included in a draft bill on a new constitution tabled in the Commons.

"Mr. Trudeau's new constitution would deny to homosexual Canadians the same legal protection against discrimination that most other Canadians now have," said a coalition press release. "Effectively, this draft bill would condemn homosexual Canadians to continued discrimination."

CANNON RETURN ORDERED

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP have been ordered to return a truckload of firearms — including two cannons and 38 government surplus machine guns — that were seized from a North Vancouver gun collector last Jan. 18.

Provincial court Judge Wallace Craig ruled in favor of an application under Section 446 of the Criminal Code that the firearms be returned to John Kenneth Hutchinson, 32. Under amendments to the code last January, police are allowed to keep seized weapons for a period of three months.

Hutchinson is scheduled to appear in provincial court Sept. 26 on charges of possession of a prohibited weapon and possession of a restricted weapon.

Life-Support Girl Dies Week After Beating

VANCOUVER (CP) - A young woman whose bodily functions had been maintained artificially died in hospital hours after a lawyer argued unsuccessfully in court that technically she was not dead.

Susan Tam, 18, had been connected to life-support machines in the intensive care unit at Vancouver General Hospital since she was found in her apartment last week unconscious and badly beaten.

Earlier Wednesday, Paul Yeck Man Leung, 19, was ordered returned to the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre to await trial on a second-degree murder charge.

Justice John Ruttan of the British Columbia Supreme Court made the order in dismissing an application by lawyer Alistair Anderson for a writ of habeas corpus for Leung.

Leung was charged Monday with second-degree murder. He originally was charged with wounding.

Provincial Court Judge D. D. Jones granted the accused $5,000 bail on the wounding charge, which prompted the Crown to lay the second-degree murder charge which denied bail.

Bruce Donald, chief Crown counsel, said at the hearing that the murder charge was laid because he was told by a doctor that Tam was clinically dead, even though she was being kept alive by life-support equipment. Donald said he was told that Tam's brain had stopped functioning and nothing could bring her back to life.

$3.5M Tab Placed On Patient Signing

VANCOUVER (CP) — A cost-benefit specialist says a provincial government plan to require patients to sign a card every time they go to a doctor would cost $3.5 million.

R. L. Schmidt said he finds it hard to believe the government would opt for such a system.

A British Columbia Medical Association suit against the government to prevent proposed changes in payments under the Medical Services Commission is to be heard in B.C. Supreme Court June 26.

Schmidt said a much more efficient means of preventing abuse of the medicare system would be to program the government computer to look for unusual billings. For example, he said, the computer could be programmed to find anyone who goes to the doctor 10 or more times a year.

He said 45 public servants would have to be hired to check the cards, doctors would face extra paper work and employers would lose money in allowing parents and guardians time off work to accompany children to the doctor for card signing.

Canoe Seeks Sanctuary

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three people attempting to sail a 67-metre dugout canoe to Hawaii from Vancouver have been forced to land in California after the skipper became sick and gales caused minor damage to some sails.

Geordie Tocher, 51, Gerhard Kiessel, 54, and Karin Lind, 34, all from the Vancouver area, arrived in Santa Cruz, Calif., earlier this week after 21 days at sea.

Tocher, who carved the Haida war canoe Orenda, lost 24 pounds on the voyage and said he is suffering from a kidney infection and carbon monoxide poisoning caused by fumes from an outboard motor they have on board.

"We have no intention of ending our journey here," Kiessel said in a telephone interview Wednesday. "We hope to sail for Hawaii in a few days and are more confident than ever that we'll make it."

He said the crew had expected to sail the Orenda 160 kilometres a day, but were only averaging 96 kilometres. They expect to reach Hawaii in mid-August.

Tocher has said that the main purpose of the 3,600-kilometre voyage is to prove that Indians from the northern British Columbia coast could have sailed to Hawaii 1,400 years ago.

Diversion Feared

VANCOUVER (CP) — The diversion of the Columbia River could spark a myriad of problems ranging from dramatic drops in fish and wildlife populations to $37-million damage to private and public property, says an environmental consultant's report.

The report represents the first-stage environmental and engineering studies of the possible diversion scheme which would cost up to $80 million and produce 810 million kilowatts of power.

The report, which focuses on the floor of the Rocky Mountain Trench, including 700,000 acres in the agricultural land reserve, says the diversion could cause flooding from Golden to Fairmont Hot Springs, a distance of about 130 kilometres.

BUDWORM TESTING

Experimental use of non-chemical agents against the western spruce budworm has been completed in the Kamloops forest district, the ministry of forests said Wednesday. "Before the trials, crews carried out a budworm count on check plots," Mike Finnis, pest management officer said in a news release. "Later, they will be counting budworm in both the sprayed and unsprayed plots to meansure the effectiveness of the two agents." Three plots near Ashcroft, Cache Creek and Lillooet were treated with the virus bacillus thuringiensis, Finnis said.

SEALED RIG YIELDS STOLEN TREASURE

VOLUNTOWN, Conn. (UPI) — Police today cut the seals on the doors of a tractor-trailer rig hijacked and abandoned by two bandits and found the $1.6 million treasure in gold and silver apparently intact.

About 12 heavily armed police officers in camouflage suits kept sentry duty during the night on the rig abandoned on a logging road, hoping the two thieves who pulled off the heist and camouflaged their treasure would return. They did not.

The tractor-trailer was commandeered by two gunmen about 6 a.m. Wednesday on Interstate 95 in North Stonington. The driver, George Smith of Fairfield, Conn., was not hurt.

The green-and-white rig was found late Wednesday about 10 miles from the scene of the hijacking in the Pachaug State Forest, a few miles from the Rhode Island border.

John McLeod of the Connecticut State Police said before opening the doors to the rig, they were dusted for fingerprints by the Connecticut major crime squad, which also looked for other physical evidence.

"We believe the shipment is intact, but we won't know for sure until the experts get a chance to look at it," said Edwin Zeitlin, insurance broker for Handy and Harman Co. of Fairfield, owner of the gold, silver and other precious metals.

"Rather than risk the possibility of tainting physical evidence, we decided to wait for the crime squad to examine it first," said McLeod.

"It's like a Christmas package," he said. "You want to get it opened up, but first you have to look it over," he said.

ART HEIST TRUCK FOUND

MARSEILLE (UPI) — Police said today they found a stolen truck which had contained over $3 million in 19th century French paintings, including a masterpiece by Paul Gauguin, but all the paintings were gone except one worth just $30,000.

The stolen paintings, a collection of 13 masterpieces which were being returned to their owners after being shown in Peking and Seoul, included Gauguin's portrait of "Madeleine Bernard," which alone is estimated at $2 million.

Four Killed In Hotel Blaze

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Flames possibly set by an arsonist ripped through a fire-plagued hotel Wednesday, killing four persons as dozens jumped screaming and weeping into the smoky night on seedy Mission Street.

At least nine persons were treated at hospitals for burns, smoke inhalation or injuries from the fire at the low-rent Miramonte Hotel, which occupied three floors above a row of shops.

Residents asleep in the small furnished apartments were awakened by the smell of smoke or the shouts of "fire, fire." The four killed by smoke inhalation or flames were found in their rooms or hallways, fire officials said.

Torturing Detailed In Guinea

LONDON (AP) — Between 2,000 and 4,000 political prisoners are being held under "extremely harsh" conditions in Guinea, Amnesty International reported Wednesday in a briefing paper on the western African country.

The rule of President Sekou Toure since independence from France about 20 years ago has seen "a significant proportion of the country's educated elite — civil servants, army officers, teachers and students, Muslim and Christian religious leaders — imprisoned, killed or forced into exile," said the London-based human rights organization, which won the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize.

Farmers and small traders also have been "arbitrarily imprisoned or driven into exile," and the Foulah ethnic group, comprising one-third of the five million inhabitants, has been subjected to "harassment and intimidation, arrest and imprisonment."

The paper said there has been a series of alleged conspiracies against Sekou Toure and most of those arrested had never been tried.

Amnesty identified the main political prison as Camp Boiro in Conakry, the coastal capital, which holds 1,500 persons in "cramped and overcrowded conditions."

"The use of torture has become an essential part of the machinery of repression in the years since independence. Consistent reports received from a number of former prisoners indicate that torture is used both as a means of general intimidation, and in order to extract 'confessions' from real or suspected opponents of the government and those who have been made scapegoats for the country's political isolation and economic failures."

Torture methods include electric shocks, severe beating, burning with cigarettes, hanging by the ankles, head-first immersion in water, tight binding with wire and ripping out of fingernails, it said.

Amnesty said it cannot check the accuracy of the reports independently because Guinea bars visits by investigators. Amnesty scaled down its work for individual prisoners in the early 1970s "because of the fear that the Guinean authorities would retaliate against prisoners whose cases were publicized," the paper said.

Attack Of The Hoppers

PAHRUMP, Nev. (AP) — For two years, Phyllis and Harry Kittaka had been living comfortably in their retirement home in this farming valley west of Las Vegas.

Kittaka, a retired laboratory technician, said hundreds of grasshoppers die at the side of the house daily and he shovels them into an incinerator and burns them.

Nixon Break-in Memo 'Missing' From FBI File

Former assistant FBI director Edward Miller also has filed court papers alleging that between 20 per cent and 40 per cent of documents used in the investigation of the break-in case have been destroyed by the FBI.

The court papers seek dismissal of the indictment against Miller, partly on grounds that he is the victim of selective prosecution by the U.S. justice department.

Miller said the missing documents might help prove that surreptitious entries by the FBI against suspected radical groups were commonplace occurences over a 25-year period and were condoned by 10 different administrations.

Miller's co-defendants are former FBI director L. Patrick Gray and W. Mark Felt, Gray's top assistant when he headed the FBI from mid-1972 to mid-1973.

Miller's court papers said the significance of the missing memo is suggested by a phone conversation Nixon had May 26, 1971, with former FBI director J. Edgar Hoover.

The court papers said Nixon told Hoover over the phone to investigate alleged terrorist killings of New York city policemen with "no punches pulled."

Miller contends that on the same day a three-page White House memo was drafted of a meeting attended by Hoover, former attorney-general John Mitchell and top White House aides.

Miller's court papers said the memorandum "has disappeared."

Spleens Regenerated In Children's Bodies

BOSTON (AP) — Children whose damaged spleens have been removed often grow new smaller versions of the blood-purifying organ that apparently help protect them from disease, doctors have found.

Researchers at Yale Medical School studied children whose spleens had been taken out because of damage suffered in car accidents and other mishaps.

Until now, doctors thought that regrowth of this organ was extremely rare. They said this is the only known instance in which the body regenerates a major organ that has been removed.

The study, entitled The Born-Again Spleen, was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

STRIKERS EVICTED

PARIS (Reuter) — Riot police expelled 200 strikers staging a sit-in protest Wednesday at a Renault car plant near here. The men left peacefully when police arrived at the factory in Flins. A Renault spokesman said work returned to normal at Flins but workers at four other of the state-owned car factories held two-hour sympathy strikes.

Canal Job Begun

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Work has begun on a 300-kilometre canal in southern Sudan that officials hope will help turn the region into the breadbasket of the Arab world.

CARTER READY FOR CONGRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Wednesday he will no longer feel legally bound by legislative vetoes.

Carter, the winner of a recent congressional battle over plane sales to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, denounced as unconstitutional the "legislative veto" process that highlighted the debate over the three-way deal.

Rick Neustadt, an aide to Carter's domestic policy adviser Stuart Eizenstat, said the message was sent to Congress at this time because about 40-50 bills awaiting House action contain provisions for legislative vetoes.

Although House and Senate leaders had no immediate comment on Carter's action, Representative Elliott Levitas (Dem. Ga.), who sponsored many of those provisos, criticized the president's position.

"The gauntlet now has been thrown down. I think we need to send a message back as soon as possible that we and the American people want this control over the unelected bureaucrats," Levitas said.

Attack On Barrett Petty: Socred

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A Social Credit backbencher today accused Premier Bill Bennett of "petty politicking" for raising the issue of NDP leader Dave Barrett taking his wife along on government air flights when he was premier.

"So what? I say it's about time politicians got out of this no wife, no family syndrome," said Omineca MLA Jack Kempf.

There might be a lot more happy politicians if they could include their wives, Kempf added.

He called the story which originated in today's edition of the Vancouver Sun "a bunch of ridiculous crap."

Barrett said today a Sun reporter showed him information which he had received from Bennett, indicating Barrett's wife Shirley accompanied him six times on trips aboard the government-owned airline.

But Barrett said all the trips were on protocol visits to which his wife was invited.

During his three and a half years in office, Barrett says he flew economy class on commercial airlines 90 per cent of the time.

And when his wife travelled with him, he paid her fare even if they both were invited to the function, the opposition leader said.

Kempf said when he first heard the story, he was furious.

When told that the information was provided to the Sun by his own premier, Kempf said: "I don't care where it came from. It is wrong. It's petty politicking."

Gaglardi took a lot of flak, Kempf said, but

Freelance Written Off?

Victoria marine surveyor Dick Meadows said today there's a less than 50-50 chance the grounded 100-foot schooner Freelance will be saved.

And even if she is salvaged, Meadows said, the cost of restoring her will be enormous.

"She has a 64-degree list and unless they can right her she's past the point of no return," Meadows said.

Meadows accompanied Dr. Philip Ney of the Quest Star Society, which planned to operate the vessel, when Ney flew down to where the schooner lies grounded on a coral reef in the San Blas Islands, east of the Panama Canal.

The Freelance was purchased by the provincial government. Up to the grounding, about $78,000 had been spent on the vessel.

Meadows said the day he was at the scene, local residents were sawing off the Freelance's boom and throwing it over the side.

"She's stripped and flooded. It's going to be a costly business if they do save her. There's a certain amount of sentimental value. People in the Carribean will be upset when they hear (of the grounding). She's an antique," he said.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said today it will be at least another day before any salvage attempt can be made.

He said the delay is because a tug slated to attempt to pull her off the reef is being used on another job.

He said he had not heard whether two U.S. army landing craft that were to straddle the Freelance in an attempt to right her are still standing by.

MEAT PLANT TO SHUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada Packers Ltd. will lock out about 180 union workers at its Vancouver production plant at Friday morning, a company spokesman said today.

The workers, members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union, would join plant workers in Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Lethbridge, Alta., locked out by the meat processing company earlier this week in a dispute over contract negotiations.

Jack Dampsy, general public relations manager, said in a telephone interview from Toronto that the company issued 72-hour lockout notice Monday after all attempts to reach a settlement had failed.

Riding Bill Tabled

Legislation to implement changes in electoral boundaries was introduced Wednesday.

The Constitution Amendment Act, 1978, was tabled less than 24 hours after former provincial court judge Larry Eckardt's controversial report on boundary changes was brought before the house.

Eckardt's report urged altering most of the province's constituency boundaries and increasing the number of MLAs by two to 57.

Opposition members have blasted the report, charging it it will weigh future elections in favor of the Social Credit party.

The new legislation — Bill 38 — follows all of Edkardt's recommendations and proposals without amendment.

The bill would increase the number of Vancouver Island ridings by one to a total of 10 by creating a new North Island riding. The new riding would be created out of the top halves of the existing Alberni and Comox ridings.

Fraser Valley would increase its representation from six to eight; Coquitlam would become two ridings and there would be a new riding in Prince George area.

The five new members would be countered by three cut-backs — two with the elimination of the double riding of Vancouver-Burrard and one in Revelstoke-Slocan.

The NDP hold all the eliminated ridings and the Socreds are traditionally strong in the areas where the new members would sit.

In their criticism of the Eckardt report, NDP MLAs have noted that the former provincial court judge ran for the Socreds in the 1966 provincial election.

Bennett denied the proposed changes will benefit Social Credit.

Raise Considered For Underpaid Vets

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald says he has ordered a new look at 48-year-old legislation because he suspects Canadians receiving veterans allowances are underpaid.

MacDonald said in an interview Wednesday there also seems to be inequities and administrative problems which call for an overhaul of the legislation affecting 96,000 veterans, veterans' widows and orphans; and some civilians who served in wartime.

So the veterans affairs department has begun a review of the War Veterans Allowance Act and the Civilian War Allowance Act. An interim report is expected this fall.

Following the study, the patched-up legislation maybe extensively repaired or even traded in on a new model—a new act.

The government gives veterans $230 million a year in allowances.

MacDonald told the Royal Canadian Legion in Edmonton recently there may be "some rather dramatic changes to further improve our service to you, the veteran."

At the moment, veterans allowances are tied to cost-of-living increases but MacDonald said here Wednesday "I'm suspicious that it is inadequate and this is why I want to determine for sure whether I'm right or wrong."

The payment levels seem to be insufficient for a "normal way of life," said the minister.

However, he noted he was talking about allowance payments and not about pensions.

The government gives allowances to veterans or their dependants to bring their monthly income to a certain level. This is separate from disability pensions which are paid to disabled veterans and their widows.

Legislation increasing disability pensions has received parliamentary approval and is awaiting royal assent. The higher disability pensions will take effect July 1.

The basic rate for an unmarried 100 per cent disability pensioner is to rise to $7,471 a year from $7,160. The pensions are adjusted according to the degree of disability and the number of dependants.

The maximum veterans allowance for an unmarried veteran is currently $265 a month. He is allowed up to $40 a month extra from an assistance fund administered by the veterans affairs department.

He is also allowed to earn up to $1,500 a year from casual work. But his allowance is reduced by whatever disability pension he is receiving.

Blood Tests 'Unreliable'

A 20-year-old former Victorian was acquitted in Victoria provincial court Wednesday on drinking-driving charges after Judge William Ostler ruled the sampling techniques of the RCMP laboratory in Vancouver were unreliable.

The ruling by Ostler is believed to be a first in B.C. and may force the RCMP to change its methods of testing ampoules used for analyzing breath samples.

James Beck, now living in in Edmonton, was charged in January, 1977, with impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08. The two readings were both .13.

However, Ostler said the sampling techniques on the potassium dichromate used to obtain breath test readings were unreliable after testimony by Zenon Samila of Vancouver, a former RCMP lab technician who resigned in January of this year.

Ostler also noted that Samila "impeached" his own certificate of analysis in this case by testifying he did not agree with established RCMP practices in testing ampoules of potassium dichromate. In his testimony, Samila was unable to categorically confirm that the ampoules were adequately tested by himself and other members of the alcohol section of the crime prevention lab in Vancouver.

Defence lawyer Robert Higinbotham called Samila to testify while Crown counsel Richard Law called upon Brian Hodgson, head of the RCMP alcohol section in Vancouver, to rebutt Samila's evidence.

Lottery Row Sparks PM, Clark Clash

OTTAWA (UPI) — An apparent new federal plan for a national lottery has sparked a confrontation between Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark.

In the House of Commons Wednesday, Clark attacked the government's refusal to withdraw a plan, which would involve importing a computer system from the United States to dispense lottery tickets.

He said Trudeau's stubbornness was driving the provinces apart and the lottery plan was made despite the fact that nine provincial premiers had expressed "shock and disapproval" over the federal government's intention "to bulldoze ahead in this field in contradiction to understandings."

Clark said that if he were elected prime minister "one of the changes I intend to introduce is to be the head of a truthful government which keeps its word.

"Also, the head of a government of a nation that stays together rather than being driven apart by intransigence and stubbornness at the centre."

The new plan, according to Clark, would "bring revenues to governments in competition with existing provincial programs which provide funds for hundreds of thousands of people involved in voluntary organizations across the country."

Trudeau retaliated saying the opposition leader's attitude was indicative of his desire to run the country by handing all power over to the provinces.

"He obviously does not want to be the leader of a national government; he wants to stick up for the provinces on every issue."

Though Trudeau denied Clark's general summary of the federal plan, he said provinces were offered "some form of agreement" whereby the federal government would share the revenue from nation-wide lotteries with the provinces.

"This is a field which is open to both levels of government. It is a revenue producing field. I see no reason in theory or in practice why the federal government should abandon it to the provinces exclusively," Trudeau said.

The only commitment his government gave the provinces, Trudeau said was that if it intended to prolong the national lottery then a bill would be presented to Parliament.

Vancouver Beer Talks Resume

Eric Harris, chief negotiator for the breweries, said the talks involve Labatt's in New Westminster and Molson's and Carling O'Keefe in Vancouver. No new talks have been scheduled for Labatt's in Victoria and Columbia brewery in Creston.

Negotiators for all five groups of employees have rejected the breweries' initial offer which was presented last Saturday.

AT 82, PAROLE COMES AT LAST

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — William Eddington Boyd, 75, will become the oldest federal penitentiary convict next month if no one older is locked up in the meantime, prison officials say.

The oldest prisoner at present is Ace Hamel, 82, who is scheduled to be parolled from the Joyceville institution in July.

Boyd, formerly of Belleville, Ont., has been serving a life sentence at Joyceville since February for second-degree murder.

Hamel has been in jail for more than half his life for a number of non-violent crimes. He was at large for two weeks in March after escaping from prison because, he said, he did not want to die in jail.

Air Strike Called Off

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada pilots agreed Wednesday to call off a strike threat and stay in their cockpits after the company agreed to let all 1,500 pilots travel first class between flying assignments.

The strike, threatened for Monday, was averted after almost nine hours of negotiation between representatives of the pilots, Air Canada and top mediators from the federal labor department.

"The strike if off. We have reached agreement," said Norman Foster, negotiator for the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA).

Foster said the crunch issue was not first-class flight privileges, but whether letters of intent between the company and the association are binding.

The pilots had voted 92 per cent in favor of a strike at the peak of the summer travel season. CALPA said Air Canada broke an agreement with the association last year when it ended the right of first and second officers to fly in first-class sections between assignments.

Air Canada spokesman Bernard Miller said following Wednesday's meeting that while the airline was meeting the pilots' demand on the travel rights issue, it was not admitting that it had breached an earlier agreement.

"We did it in order to restore our relationship with the pilots . . . and to recognize both parties' responsibility to the travelling public and to do what we could to avoid a strike."

With the issue of travelling between assignments — deadheading — temporarily resolved, the Crown corporation and CALPA now will settle down to full contract negotiations.

The pilots have been without a contract since January. Negotiations for a new contract have been held up by the question of whether Air Canada violated an agreement by restricting first-class travel rights.

Canoeists Try Foiling Spray Plan

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — Environmentalists took to canoes and planned to go to the courts today to protest against approval of permits to apply the controversial herbicide 2,4-D to fight Eurasian water milfoil weeds in three Okanagan lakes.

Permits approved were for Okanagan, Skaha, and Kalamalka lakes.

Jay Lewis informatoom director for the South Okanagan Environmental Coalition, said Osoyoos Lake was rejected because it is small and shallow and the pesticide might not break down as quickly.

Lewis said protesters in 15 canoes paddled among employees of the water investigation branch as they did prepatory work for application of the herbicide.

About 50 persons were involved in the peaceful protest.

Canada Day Legal Soon?

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger may issue a proclamation to officially change the name of Dominion Day to Canada Day, State Secretary John Roberts told the Commons Wednesday.

But even if the name is not changed, "we intend again this year to celebrate Canada Day on Dominion Day," Roberts told Leonard Jones (Ind.—Moncton).

Jones noted that legally July 1 is Dominion Day and asked if the government is planning "to continue to disregard the law" by calling the holiday Canada Day.

The New Brunswick MP's concern had been raised by John Diefenbaker, former Progressive Conservative prime minister, last year in the Commons following a series of government announcements referring to Canada Day.

Prime Minister Trudeau had replied to the Saskatchewan MP that Canada Day was a name favored by many Canadians.

The federal government has earmarked $4.5 million to subsidize celebrations for the 111th anniversary of Confederation, hoping the birthday party will foster national unity.

Thwack, Swish and Then Crash!

. . . A Slice of Life for the Grews

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

For almost two years Herb Grew and his family have been under fire from misguided missiles and — not surprisingly — they're getting a mite edgy.

Although the house is well removed from the green itself, Grew notes that it must be just the right — or wrong — distance from the tee to be a target for sliced shots.

In fact, it's getting so that they flinch every time they hear the thwack of a driver connecting with a ball.

To date there have been two alarming incidents, and Grew wants action from Saanich municipal hall before someone is seriously injured or killed.

And a few months later their 13-year-old son was struck on the shoulder by a ball which crashed through the bathroom window. Fortunately, it had lost most of its impetus so he wasn't hurt.

The aluminum siding surrounding their sundeck is pockmarked with indentations from errant balls. Grew says his 18-year-old daughter Jayne became so nervous about sitting out there he had to build a special screen of unbreakable glass at head level.

Weekday golfers are generally older, experienced players who don't put a lot of beef into their drives, so there's not much danger. But weekends are the problem time.

As Grew says: "The weekend golfers are the ones we have to watch. The young swingers fancy themselves as a second Jack Nicklaus, and hit big drives — often with no control at all.

"The balls are lethal, like bullets."

He says he realized when he purchased the house that there would be some nuisance factor, from golfers retrieving balls for instance, but he didn't expect his family would be under bombardment.

A 10-foot screen which municipal staff erected alongside the tee last year has done little to solve the problem, because sliced shots are still lofted over the net.

Grew says the municipality should either screen the area properly or relocate the tee in a safe position.

Failing that, he would like unbreakable glass installed in his kitchen and bathroom windows.

In the letter he wrote to Saanich in late April, he said: "I have gone part way to safeguarding my family by screening the sundeck on the property and think that Saanich council, who approved the building of houses in that area, should ensure that it is safe to live there."

Parks and recreation director Bill Young told the Times Wednesday he hopes to meet with Grew and discuss measures to safeguard the house.

"Any house on the perimeter of a golf course will be exposed to balls at one time or another," Young said. "Hopefully we will be able to resolve this one very quickly."

Four Teen-Agers Hurt in Grinding Car Crash

A spectacular single-car crash on West Saanich Road Wednesday night sent four teen-agers to Royal Jubilee Hospital, two in serious condition.

The vehicle skidded 218 feet along a ditch, bounced back on to the road, travelled 81 feet, returned to the ditch, flipped over and rolled three times over a distance of 65 feet, knocked down a steel post and ended up in a driveway 88 feet further down the road.

Thomas Keith Halsey, 17, of 2778 Seaview, the driver of the car, and Jennifer Teresa Little, 17, of 1560 Elm, were reported in stable condition this morning with undetermined injuries.

Saanich police said Halsey lost control of the car rounding a sharp curve in the 5000-block at 10:40 p.m.

They were both unconscious when taken to hospital.

Two back seat passengers, Barry Newton, 17, of 2950 Seaview, and David Sheffield, 17, of 3917 Tudor, stayed with the car and escaped with relatively minor injuries. Newton was treated and released, and Sheffield is in satisfactory condition.

CRD Attack 'Nonsensical'

A recent attack on the Capital Regional District by Victoria Ald. John Hayes was shallow and nonsensical, board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

"It was a loud, hollow sound coming from an empty space," said Campbell of Hayes' call to have the CRD disbanded by the provincial government.

Hayes said the regional body cost more than it's worth.

Campbell said that "nobody's perfect and I'd like to see our budget reduced," but the CRD's major costs are on services the municipalities have asked for.

He said the regional health function, for example, is provided by the CRD because the municipalities of Oak Bay, Victoria and Esquimalt directed the district to perform that task.

"That's the single most costly item in our budget," said Campbell. "We deliver that service a good deal more efficiently than any municipality could, and if Victoria wanted to take that service back there'd be no opposition from me."

Campbell said the CRD provides services in a more efficient manner than any other system yet devised.

He said if the regional government was disbanded then the intermunicipal committee would be called on to organize services "and I doubt if you can think of anything funnier than that."

Campbell said the intermunicipal committee is "the most time-consuming and unproductive body in politics — they can't even deal with the unimportant matters that face them now so you can only imagine what would happen if they had to deal with major items."

Campbell said the way for the regional district to reduce costs is to cut back "on the artificially high standards imposed upon us by the bureaucrats of Victoria and the bureaucrats of Ottawa."

He said that "the other high cost is what I call the high cost of protest — the cost of dealing with highly organized and vocal minorities."

Ask The Times

Q. Was there a Canadian record set by the armed forces in west-east air travel in 1976? K.S.G.

A. Two CF-5 jet fighters of 434 Squadron took off Nov. 22, 1976, at CFB Comox and flew non-stop to CFB Shearwater, N.S., with two in-flight refuellings by a 437 Squadron jet tanker. The pilots were Capt. Rod Sword, of Victoria, and Lieut.-Col. Scott Clements, who made the flight in four hours, 29 minutes, 17 seconds, the first to do so.

Tool Plant Eyed By City Investor On College Land

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria investor Nick Liberto said today he wants to build a tool manufacturing plant on 85 acres of Camosun College property.

Liberto said the plant would employ 105 people, be modern, attractive and non-polluting.

Liberto said Economic Development Minister Don Phillips has offered to help him get started but the question of the land will have to go to cabinet.

"There is a cabinet meeting this morning and I believe it is being discussed. We are all set to go once a site is obtained."

If the Camosun deal is rejected, Liberto wants to trade for land in the industrial plant being created by Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier — if it can be prepared in time.

"We must get an answer on the land right away," Liberto said. "We have orders for $2.5 million worth of bits per month, starting Jan. 1, and unless we can produce the bits by then we will lose the order."

He said he will go to Alberta next week to study sites in that province if there is any indication the Victoria proposal will be stalled in red tape.

His partner, Dennis Derosz, has created a drilling bit that is creating interest because it does not require ball bearings and therefore does not wear out as quickly as conventional bits, he said.

The company has been incorporated as the Derosz Tool Co.

Liberto said the company has or can raise all the required financing.

"Land is the big question. We need a site and we need it quickly."

He said he selected Camosun College because there is a total of 225 acres, much of it unused.

"This would be a modern, clean, non-polluting plant. It would fit in well with houses in the surrounding area," he said.

The company needs about 85 acres eventually, he said. It would like to start with about 45 acres and would construct a building of 32,000 square feet.

Liberto said more land would be required and more buildings constructed as orders for the drilling bits increased.

Liberto said he is not looking for any government favors except help in obtaining land quickly.

Greater Victoria industrial development commissioner Barry Mayhew said the plant would be an important addition to the local economy if land can be obtained.

50 Films To Be Shown At Beacon Hill

Sponsored by the National Film Board and the city, the program starts July 4.

The films will be presented every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday - a total of 12 programs - during July. The showings will begin at 9 p.m. and last about one hour.

There will be six showings on Aug. 1, 2, 3, 8, 9 and 10.

One Last Varoom

After a long up-hill battle the Victoria Motorcycle Club has won the fight to run their annual dirt bike contest at Mount Douglas.

But the hillclimb scheduled for Oct. 1 will be the last one, ending a tradition that started in 1919.

The Victoria and Saanich parks committee Wednesday reversed an earlier decision to ban the bikes from Mount Douglas this fall. In changing its mind, however, the committee also made it clear there will be no next time for the club.

He said the club will look for a new location.

The hillclimb issue blew up earlier this year when the club decided not to take the parks committee's original decision lying down.

Club members wrote letters, lobbied politicians and Wednesday showed up with a 2,500-name petition supporting the hillclimb.

The committee relented, but at the same time told the club to start looking for a new site for next year's climb.

In 1979 the climb will celebrate its 50th year.

A FLASHBACK

An Island of Memories

The elder Mead-Robins married in 1934. He and his family lived in the island's village of about 46 houses until June 1962 when the island's school was closed and the residents left for Vanvouver Island across the way.

The Mead-Robins described how the pitch fire allowed the Indian crabber to see his prey in the water. The son rememberered it as "a most romantic sight."

His father recalls being able to buy two large crabs for 25 cents and times when salmon was so plentiful James Island residents would dig surplus fish into their gardens for fertilizer.

"If you were lucky a 15 to 20-pound salmon would fetch a quarter."

He recalls the village as being an Eden, the residents all vying for the annual prize given to the family with the most improved garden. He remembers how some university students, hired for the summer by CIL, were diverted to gardening chores on the village's sidewalks.

Memories like these are stirred by those who have lived and worked on the island with the news that CIL is shutting down its nitroglycerine operation and laying off 96 men on Sept. 30, leaving only about five people to operate an explosives distribution point.

While the shutdown is shattering for some of the workers, it promises peace for the deer that roam the island.

The deer became so plentiful over the years that Raymond Rivers, who now lives at the Harbor Towers in James Bay, was employed as the official shooter, his friend, the elder Mead-Robins, recalls.

These are not native deer. They're descendants of fallow deer, imported from Scotland in 1907 by Irving H. Wheatcroft, general manager of the Kentucky Valley Railroad. Wheatcroft had bought the island from Dr. G.L. Findlay and Lady Sybil Findlay. The deer were brought in to create a private hunting ground on the island.

When the James Island plant began operating in the First World War, there were as many as 1,200 working on the island. A camp for the men was established on the spit and another camp for women workers on the northern end of the island.

James Island was put on the map and the Nova Scotian port of Halifax nearly erased in 1917 when the French ship Mont Blanc exploded in Halifax harbor.

The Mont Blanc was carrying TNT from James Island and the explosion devastated the north side of the city, killing 2,000.

On the island itself, however, the safety record has been good with only one tragedy. That occurred in September 1946 when nearly a ton of gelatine exploded, killing three men and injuring two.

Mostly memories of the island have been quiet ones — fishing, crabbing and walking the sand-sweet beaches.

The simple life is exemplified by one memory recorded by Jim Bond, who used to run the 29-passenger ferry. As a pre-schooler in 1915 when the first log cabins were being built he recalls his first Christmas on the island. The Christmas tree was decorated with shin plasters and a 25-cent bill.

When the main workforce leave the island for the last time in September little will be left but buildings, a few men, memories — and the deer.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were moderately lower in active trading on the Toronto stock market.

Declines led advances 207 to 147 with 212 issues unchanged.

Consumers Distributers resumed trading after a one-day halt for news it has agreed to acquire May Department Store Co.'s catalogue showroom business in the U.S. It dropped 1⅛ to $13⅝ on the sale of 42,000 shares.

Among other industrials, Provincial Bank of Canada fell ½ to $15, Crestbrook Forest ⅛ to $6⅝, Canadian Imperial Bank ⅛ to $28½, Oshawa Group class A ⅛ to $7 and Carling O'Keefe five cents to $4.40.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market inched upward with gambling and airline issues providing bits of excitement in an otherwise lacklustre session.

The slight turnaround apparently began late Wednesday, when the Dow Jones, down by about six points, began to rally. The slight upswing after two days of declines continued into today as the troubled dollar began to recover some lost ground on foreign exchange markets, apparently on reports President Carter may raise oil-import fees to discourage petroleum consumption unless Congress enacts his oil-tax plan.

But analysts also were waiting for the Federal Reserve Board's weekly money supply report, scheduled for release after the 4 p.m. NYSE close, to see if new credit-tightening moves might be indicated.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mainly lower in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Volume at 2.30 p.m. EDT was 424,600 shares traded, compared with 405,200 shares traded up to the same time Wednesday. Brascan A was down ⅛ at $16½, Domtar ¼ at $17½, Inco A ⅛ at $18, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ⅛ at $28¼, B.C. Forest Products ⅜ at $28 and Simpson's Ltd. ¼ at $5¼. FCA International was up 15 cents at $2.55 and Alcan ⅜ at $30¼.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — Prices drifted lower today in light trading, though the market closed above lowest levels following a technical reaction, dealers said. Near the close of trading the Financial Times index was down 2.9 at 452.7. Government bonds showed a net fall of ⅛ after losing up to ¾ at the outset following selling ahead of the call on the long tap, and on concern over the status of sterling after a further narrowing in the differential between U.S. and British interest rates Wednesday. Gold shares softened in line with the fall in the bullion price. U.S. and Canadian issues eased.
